CASTLE HALL, HERBON LODGE, 175, K. P. DWIGHT, ILL., June 10, 1891.

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Divine Ruler of the universe to take from our midst our beloved brother, John Stren, a member of this Lodge, therefore be it

Resolved That Herbon Lodge, No. 175, extend to the family and friends of Bro. Stren our sincere sympathy in their hour of trouble.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be published in the DWIGHT STAR and HERALD, and a copy be sent to the bereaved wife and family, and a page of the minute book be kept sacred to his memory, and that the charter of our lodge be draped in mourning for thirty days.

JOHN GEIS, W. C. BARTHOLOIC, J. B. FRANCE.

The Gallant 129th.

W. B. Fyfe, in his interesting "Memories" of the 129th. Ill. Vol. I. during the war, being published in the Pontiac Sentinel, has the following from his history of the great battle of Peach Tree Creek, July 20, 1864.

After depicting the terrible scenes of the battle, which will be distinctly remembered by the members of the regiment, he takes up the sad duty of recording the names of the killed and wounded. They are as follows:

The following men of our regiment were killed:

George R. Sarvis, Co. C. The acquaintance I had with Comrade Sarvis was a very favorable one. I had met him several times. He was an honor both to Co. C. and the regiment. I think he enlisted from the vicinity of Dwight township.

A comrade to young Sarvis, Enos Morris, was killed at the same time, Daniel H. Howder was also killed at this fight, while doing his whole duty, in beating back the sudden attack of the foe.

Francis Penfield was also killed. He was from Pontiac, a working man, who fell trying to uphold the old flag as did all the other boys.

Since writing these names, I find in my diary, written at the time, the following on the roll of the killed and wounded of our regiment on the 20th:

Co. A.—Wounded—C. J. Nelson, wounded in breast and arm.

Co. B.—Wounded—J. W. Staley, B. Banderburgh, J. Cann, H. Vanderburgh.

Co. C.—Wounded—J. Funk, E. Slosser, J. Foster, T. Swan, Jos. Green, Wm. Cottrell, J. Rustin. Killed—George Sarvis, Enos Morris.

Co. D.—Wounded—Jas Howard, J. Stainby, Capt. Birch, Killed—D. Michael, J. Green.

Co. E.—Wounded—Wm. J. Priest, Amos Shaw, R. Tanner, Wm. Reed, A. N. Patton. Killed—S. A. Stoddard and H. A. Bullman.

Co. F.—Wounded—Comrades C. and J. Chapman.

Co. G.—Wounded—J. Myer, W. H. H. Perry, Samuel Anderson, C. Peterson, W. H. St. John, Albert Marble, John S. Lee, Killed—F. Penfield, and D. Howder.

Co. H.—Wounded—Comrades Kuhn, Claywell, Hetherington, Mayhew, Haleiman and Vest. Killed—Comrades Bower and King.

Co. I.—Comrade Middendorf.

Co. K.—Wounded—Comrades Lamb, Lathrop, Vanstyle and Jenks. Killed—Comrades Kay, Mack and King.

Do You Want a Home?

Most everybody does. If this is the case with the reader call on J. W. Baker, secretary of a building and loan association, and he will give you some pointers that will be beneficial to you. He represents the great Minneapolis association, and wants everyone that wants to secure a home by paying small monthly installments, to call on him before investing in other associations. He is confident he can save you money.

There are people in the world that are actual born kickers. Some are not satisfied with the time the sun rises, and wouldn't be if they could direct its course. Others seem to take a special delight in being obstructionists to every good thing proposed in a community, but we are pleased to state that at the present crisis in Dwight, their number can be counted on the fingers of the hands. Any citizen that is so near-sighted as regards the future of Dwight that he cannot see in the future a prosperous city, instead of a village, deserves the sympathy of all. Such people, if we have any, should have the fact impressed upon their minds that they are in a hopeless minority, and that the sooner they get into the band wagon and join the progressive procession, the better for them and the more respect people will have for them.

SOMETHING ABOUT ICE.

Once It Was a Luxury, Now It Is a Necessity.

At one time in the world's history ice was considered a great luxury, and only the rich could enjoy what is now looked upon as an absolute necessity. In ancient days snow was used as a substitute. It was brought from the mountain and stored away in pits dug in the earth, and covered with straw or other substances that proved nonconductors of heat and also protected from the heat.

Mention of this fact is made in the Proverbs of Solomon, and it is frequently alluded to in the writings of the ancient Greeks and Romans. It is still in vogue in Italy, where snow gathered in the Apennines is brought by peasants to the principal cities and stored in cellars made especially for that purpose. It was not until 1845 that ice was publicly sold in London and then only in very small quantities.

In America ice houses have been known for the last 200 years. They were at first very primitive affairs, being nothing more than deep cellars, the flooring made of boards or stone, upon which was placed a layer of straw or sawdust. The sides were lined with boards set about a foot from the walls, and this space was filled in with sawdust, tanbark or straw. A rough, thatched roof completed the structure, which was then filled with ice, between the layers of which tanbark or sawdust was strowed.

As a matter of course, the supply of cut ice was very limited in time, and it was not until about fifty years ago that it became a commodity admitting of purchase by persons of moderate means. In New York City alone, at the present day, the yearly consumption of ice amounts to about 1,000,000 tons.

In addition to its employment for cooling water and other beverages, in the course of time its value as an agent for preserving meats, fruits, etc., was recognized, and as a consequence the demand for it was greatly increased.

Trustworthy authorities state that the use of ice for preventing the decomposition of dead bodies was known in very early days, as there was a tribe in Finland which, during the latter part of the seventh century, preserved the bodies of their dead for many months without embalming them, using either snow or ice for the purpose.

Does Your Name End with "On"?

There is an old bachelor in New York who devotes his time to mousing around in libraries and picking up all sorts of queer theories about various subjects. He is a great reader and claims to have made a great discovery, that the greatest men and women in the world's history had names which ended in "on." Here is a list he furnishes:

Samson, Solomon, Napoleon, Washington, Wellington, Newton, Bacon, Johnson, Nelson, Hamilton, Milton, Byron, Jefferson, Danteon, Jackson, Emerson, Edison, Harison, Clinton, Lincoln, Stephenson, Calderon, Porson, Anacron, Madison, Hudson, Stanton, Buffon, Melancthon, Massillon, Colon, Gibbon, Bion, Addison, Walton, Whittington, Parton, Heber Newton, Francis Wilson, Henry Watterson, President Patton, Dr. Patton, Mr. Preston, Farison, Sir William Hamilton, Mason and Dixon, Remben E. Fenton, Gen. McPherson, Levi P. Morton, Andrew Johnson, Gen. Joe Johnston, MacMahon, Higginson, Eggleston, Fenelon, Kit Carson, Audubon, Burton, Chatterton, Gen. Marion, Mary Anderson, Adelaide Neilson, Lord Treanynson, Bulwer Lyton, and many others.

Was Not Born to Be Killed.

John N. Hutchinson, of Covington, Ky., seems to be death proof. He has met with no less than twenty-five accidents in the last ten years. At the Sullivan gas pits in Indiana, in 1874, there were thirteen men killed. He was a green hand and escaped. He fell from the roof of St. Mary's School House while it was being erected. He dropped a distance of seventy-five feet, and was badly injured. He was also hurt at the fruit house, and fell from a church at West Covington. While walking on a railroad track with two other men, a train came along and killed his companions. He was stealing a ride with two tramps in Indiana. The train jumped the track, and the two tramps were killed. He was hurt at the Duerber Works, and a dozen other places. Both his hands were broken, several ribs fractured, his head crushed, his leg broken, and yet to-day he is a pretty good man.

A Bank on Wheels.

New Zealand has set an example which might advantageously be followed in certain parts of this country. In the same way as we have "cathedral cars" it has "traveling banks." A clerk, representing the bank, travels up and down a railway line for the transaction of the ordinary business of the bank with those who have not sufficient facilities for coming into the city. Lately with a car containing his supply of cash, and provided with a teller's usual precautions against robbery, the clerk makes the carriage his headquarters, and there receives visits from customers at the way stations, changing checks or taking deposits as occasion requires. The plan is said to prove profitable to the bank and a great convenience to the settlers. It is not difficult, however, to see that the New Zealanders are not properly educated in the matter of train robbery.

Gentlemen Members.

Two enterprising young men in Chicago have started a novel establishment for the aid and comfort of single men, whose clothes are constantly out of repair and in need of mending. They will send a patron's house in the morning and collect whatever articles of wearing apparel may be in need of a little mending, a few buttons or a neat patch. Such repairs as are needed are quickly made and the garments returned before night. The idea is certainly a good one, and its originators deserve success. But it will take something more than this institution to prove that marriage is a failure.

Should Know Where He's Going.

Somebody who has taken the trouble to gather the figures finds that there were no less than 4,200 wills contested in the courts in this country during last year, and about 60 per cent. of these contests were successful. These statistics seem to show that the best time for a man to dispose of his wealth is while he is yet alive.

Chinamen and Negroes in Kentucky.

The census shows that Kentucky has only 29 Chinamen, which is an increase of 19 in ten years. The negro population increased only 1,430 in the decade, while the whites number 208,347 more than they mustered ten years ago.
