ALL PASSED BY BUT A TRAMP.

He was a Wreck, but He Stopped to Rescue a Distress'd Horse.

He came shambling out of an alley. If appearances count for anything, he had been thrown out of the low grogery hidden in its depths because he had pocketed the contents of a drink in his pocket.

A little further along the street was a buggy. In the buggy was a woman. She had been left to take care of the horse. A hitching-post would have done the work better.

Now, my dear pastor, I do hope you will pardon me for bothering you so long with my own little family cares and anxieties.
