The Only One Ever Printed—Can You Find the Word?

There is a 3-inch display advertisement in this paper this week which has no two words alike except one word. The same is true of each new one appearing each week from The Dr. Harter Medicine Co. This house places a "Crescent" on everything they make and publish. Look for it, send them the name of the word, and they will return you BOOK, BEAUTIFUL LITHOGRAPHS, OR SAMPLES FREE.

Stopped

—the progress of Consumption. The best authorities agree that it's a scrofulous affection of the lungs. If taken in time, and given a fair trial, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will effect a cure. Thousands have been saved by it—thousands more are putting it off till too late. For every form of Scrofula, Bronchial, Throat, and Lung Affections, Weak Lungs, Severe Coughs, and kindred ailments, it is a positive remedy. It's guaranteed to do all that's claimed for it. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, your money is returned.

The "Discovery" is the only Liver, Blood and Lung Remedy that's sold so. Think what a medicine it must be!

Especially has it manifested its potency in curing Tetter, Salt-rheum, Eczema, Erysipelas, Boils, Carbuncles, Sore Eyes, Goitre, or Thick Neck, and Enlarged Glands.

CONSUMPTION.

"I'LL RIDE HIM ONE."

Kidd, the Newly Arrived English Jockey, Gives an Exhibition of Spartan Stoicism.

An example of stoicism that has few parallels in the racing calendar escaped the notice of the thoughtless crowd at Garfield Park at the close of the day's sport. After the three leaders had finished in the hurdle race a horse that had fallen and thrown his jockey at the half mile jump came galloping down the stretch. The rider had regained his seat and sat as firmly as if he was still in the race with strong hopes of winning. Reining up in front of the judges the boy raised his right hand without a tremor. His face bore the hue of ashes and his teeth were clinched. He dismounted without assistance and tried to unbuckle his saddle girths to weigh out. There his strength failed him.

"Some one 'll 'ave to 'elp me," he said in an English accent and with a feeble attempt at a smile—"I'm 'urt."

"And Leland also ran!" jeered the crowd pouring out of the grand stand.

That boy's collar bone was fractures and bulged almost through his jacket.

His name is Kidd and he landed in New York the other day, coming direct to Chicago. He presented his credentials as a steeple chase jockey who had learned his trade in England, and yesterday the Itasca stable people gave him the mount on Leland, a horse that had been schooled over the jumps, but had never started in a hurdle race. The horse was not considered an element in the race and the stranger's name did not inspire confidence in his chances. The young man's firm and graceful seat was admired, however, by the critical observers as Leland galloped by going to the post.

Kidd pressed his mount out in front at the start and clearing the first obstruction as light as a feather showed the way down the stretch, over the second and third jumps riding like a centaur, Leland tired in the heavy going. At the half-mile hurdle he faltered, stumbled and fell. Kidd fell with him and in such a way that the horse's weight came upon his chest.

A score of attendants rushed to the assistance of the jockey, who was prone in the mud.

"Don't mind me," said Kidd firmly, struggling to his feet as they approached him. "Catch the 'orse. I must ride him 'ome."

"Never mind the horse. Let us take you to the paddock; you're hurt," came from one of the crowd.

"No, no! Catch the 'orse quick. That wouldn't be right. I must ride him 'ome."

The horse was caught and Kidd was assisted into the saddle. Clapping the spurs to him he cleared the next jump, rode through the last one, as a section had been removed, and galloped to the finish to weigh out with the other jockeys.

Kidd's shoulder-blade had sustained an ugly break, and the surgeon who examined him was astonished that he retained consciousness, much less sufficient strength to continue the race.—Chicago Times.

Daniel Webster's Unlicked Hand.

A story of Daniel Webster, told by himself long years ago, comes to the Times at only second hand from the lady who heard him tell it.

Webster, as a boy in the rude village school at Salisbury (now Franklin), N. H., where he lived in boyhood, was not free from the small pranks and mischiefs in which boys of a dozen years are (or used to be) apt to indulge even in school hours. It was a whipping punishment then for almost everything, and the master, a hard disciplinarian, had called Daniel up to his chair.

"I used to have, I am sorry to say it," said the statesman, "as a schoolboy, very dirty hands. On being called up to be 'ferruled,' the customary form of punishment then, I covertly and hastily licked one hand, to make it more presentable, and hurriedly wiped it by rubbing it on my sleeve, after getting up from my seat.

"'Hold out your hand?' was the command, and out went the hand I had tried to lick.

"'Dan,' exclaimed the master in a reproving tone, looking at the dirty little paw, 'if you show me a dirtier hand than that in all this school I'll let you off.'

"Immediately," added Webster. "I thrust out the other hand! The schoolmaster was stumped. But he was as good as his word; he let me off."—Hartford Times.

How the Servant Got Even.

Early the other morning a patrol wagon was called to No. 328 East Fort street. When the vehicle got up into that neighborhood a bare-headed female came flying to meet it.

"I want you to arrest Mrs. Goode," she cried excitedly. "She's my mistress and lives at No. 328. I want her arrested because she hasn't raised my wages as she promised."

The woman who made the remarkable request was Hannah Clifford, a domestic. Hannah is a good girl, but has a peculiarity. Whenever Mrs. Goode found it necessary to scold her Hannah felt so much aggrieved that she called the patrol wagon and wanted her mistress arrested. After the fit passed away she became penitent, and Mrs. Goode always forgave her. Yesterday morning the patrol wagon officers felt tired of being fooled, and locked Hannah up in place of Mrs. Goode.—Detroit News.

BLOOD FLOWS IN CORK.

FIERCE FACTIONAL FIGHT IN THE STREETS.

Parnellites and McCarthyites Come Together, and Bricks, Stones, and Shillalahs Are Used Vigorously—The Rioters Separated with Difficulty.

Strife in Ireland.

When Messrs William O'Brien and John Dillon arrived in Cork, the two distinguished members of Parliament were met by a deputation composed of members of the National Federation, representatives of the Gaelic club, the municipal officers, and a large number of priests. An enormous crowd of people lined the route, followed by the procession which followed Messrs. O'Brien and Dillon from the railroad station. The procession was headed by a brass band and was escorted by a strong detachment of police.

The fact that the police and military were thoroughly prepared for a riot alone prevented the city from becoming a scene of slaughter. After the convention a large body of police closed about Dillon and O'Brien to escort them to their hotel. Dillon passed a few words of commonplace with the inspector in command, and that functionary listened very stiffly and condescendingly. The incident was witnessed by the Parnellites, who howled in derision. For some distance the procession passed along without more serious demonstration, the crowds on the street, however, growing every moment more excited. The McCarthyites, including a number of priests and the redoubtable Canon O'Mahoney, followed Dillon and O'Brien. Every now and then a Parnellite in the crowd would howl and swing a shillalah around his head and make a dash for the McCarthyites. The police would then charge and restore order for a moment.

At length the Parnellites grew uncontrollable, and yells of "Murderers," "England's lickspittles," and other epithets saluted the McCarthyites. The latter knew that they would soon be attacked, and came to a halt, turning on their assailants. Missiles of all kinds flew through the air, and the cries of defiance became louder and louder. The blood flowing from injured heads and limbs, the groans of the fallen wounded, the fierce energy of the combatants, and the ebb and flow of the tide of battle, as the advantage veered to either side, gave a realistic picture resembling somewhat the Communist uprising in Paris.

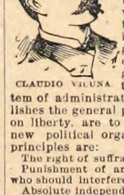
The mounted constabulary was hurriedly formed in order for a charge. It was a dangerous duty, for deadly missiles were flying on every hand, and the order was given to cut right between the two parties, where the police would receive the volleys from both. Not a constable flinched. They formed as perfectly as on parade and started on the gallop at the word of command. The order was given to strike only with the flats of their sabers, and there is no reason to believe that, under great provocation, it was disobeyed.

As the constables spurred forward the volleys of missiles grew thicker, for each side was sure that if they missed each other they would at least hit a policeman. The police were persistent, however, and at length succeeded in breaking up the riot; this result, however, being largely due to the fact that the factions were appalled at the number of the wounded. Many of the latter were taken to their homes and others to the hospitals. Whether any cases have proved fatal is not yet known.

THE SITUATION IN CHILI.

Revolutionary Parties Unite Upon a Programme—Merchants Suffer Heavily.

Chilian advices say the different political parties that initiated the revolution are making a draft of the program that is to be observed by the new administration and that they will all sign, pledging themselves to respect it, no matter who gains the Presidential election. This program does not tend to provide a new system of administration, but merely establishes the general principles that, based on liberty, are to be observed by the new political organization, and these principles are:



CLAUDIO VICUNA

The right of suffrage.
Punishment of any Government official who should interfere in the elections.
Absolute independence of the three chief authorities of the nation.
Responsibility of the Presidents and their ministers.
Reduction of the ordinary expenses.
Amelioration of the foreign debt and conversion of the national paper currency into metallic currency, and the reduction of the army and augmentation of the fleet.
Suppression of unnecessary employments.
Steady development of railroads.
Amicable relations with all other nations.
Limitation of the diplomatic service.
Establishment of commercial treaties with different nations.

Reports received at Iquique from the south state that a large number of executions have occurred at Santiago and Valparaiso in the last few weeks. The victims had been particularly active in their opposition to the revolutionists, but none of them were persons of any special prominence.

Vicuna, who was elected President of the southern districts two months ago and who was regarded as the representative of Balmaceda, is now in Callao.

Catarrh in the H & S

Is a constitutional and not a local disease, and therefore it cannot be cured by local applications. It requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, working through the blood, effects a permanent cure of catarrh by eradicating the impurity which causes and promotes the disease. Thousands of people testify to the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for catarrh when other preparations had failed. Hood Sarsaparilla also builds up the whole system, and makes you feel revived in health and strength. All who suffer from catarrh or debility should certainly try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I have used Hood's Sarsaparilla for catarrh with satisfactory results, receiving permanent benefit from it." J. F. HUBBARD, Strator, Ill.

"I have been taking Hood past four years at intervals. catarrh, and the medicine effects. take it now whenever I feel debilitated, gives me immediate strength, regulates the bowels, and gives an excellent appetite." LEVI CAMPBELL, Parker bury, W. Va.

"My daughter has had catarrh for nine years. She coughed and expectorated so much that every one thought she had consumption. I tried everything I heard of, but gained no relief. I sent her to Florida in September for the winter, and there her friends advised her to use Hood's Sarsaparilla. She wrote me that she had taken three bottles, and never felt so good in her life." A Dying Scotchman.

A Christian man was dying in Scotland. His daughter Nellie sat by the bedside. It was Sunday evening, and the bell of the Scotch kirk was ringing, calling the people to church. The good old man in his dying dream thought that he was on his way to church, as he used to be when he went in the cart across the river; and as the evening bell struck up, in his dying dream he thought it was the call to church. He said: "Hark, children, the bells are ringing; we shall be late; we must make the mare step out quick!" He shivered, and then said: "Pull the buffalo robe up closer, my lass! It is cold crossing the river, but we will soon be there!" And he smiled and said: "Just there now!" No wonder he smiled. The good old man had got to church. Not the Scotch kirk, but the temple in the skies. Just across the river. How comfortably did God hush that old man to sleep! As one whom his mother comforteth, so God comforted him.

Disastrous Failure!

It is with feelings of regret that we announce the failure of hosts of people troubled with indigestion of the kidneys to take efficient means to renew their activity. This failure is most disastrous, for a complete wreck of the organs themselves must eventuate if timely means are not taken to re-establish their secretive function on a basis of activity and regularity. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters renews both, and prevents ultimate and fatal disaster. As it is one of the functions of the kidneys to strain from the blood, in its passage through them, impurities productive of dropsy, rheumatism, and gout, an early impetus is all the more needful to be given to their operations when tardy or ineffectual. The unmedicated stimuli of commerce do not answer this purpose. Use the Bitters for dyspepsia, malaria, constipation and biliousness.

Justifies the Name.

An instructor in natural history who believes that it is better to deliver little lectures to his pupils than to let them get their knowledge out of books, talked to them thus one day on the subject of the hog:

"The hog, my young friends, is, from the fact of yielding food, the most important of animals to the human race. There is no part of his structure which has not some alimentary or industrial use; even his bristles are used in the manufactures.

"But from the point of view of character and mode of life, it must be confessed that he possesses certain habits and dispositions which fully justify his name!"

This reminds one of the opening lines of a composition once submitted by a boy in a New England school:

THE GOOS.

The goos is so called becaus it acs kinder silly and don't kno any bett.

"A Yard of Roses."

One of the popular paintings at the New York Academy of Design was a yard-long panel of roses. A crowd was always before it. One art critic exclaimed: "Such a bit of nature should belong to all the people; it is too beautiful for one man to hide away."

The Youth's Companion, of Boston, seized the idea and spent $20,000 to reproduce the painting. The result has been a triumph of artistic delicacy and color.

The Companion takes this copy of the painting an autumn gift to each of its five hundred thousand subscribers. Any who may subscribe now for the first time and requests it will receive "The Yard of Roses" without extra charge while the edition lasts.

Besides the gift of this beautiful picture, all new subscribers will receive the Companion free from the time the subscription is received till Jan. 1, including the Thanksgiving and Christmas double numbers, and for a full year from that date.

Every family should take this brightest and best of illustrated literary papers in addition to its local paper.

Had No Chance.

"Your husband," said the caller, sympathizingly, "was a man of many excellent qualities."

"Yes," sighed the widow. "He was a good man. Everybody says so. I wasn't much acquainted with him myself. He belonged to six lodges."

Unseasonable Happiness.

A new waitress in a certain family astonished the members thereof by bursting into song the first time she waited upon them at dinner. When her mistress spoke to her about it she said: "Why, was I singing? Well, I often do when I feel happy."—Boston Transcript.
