CURRENT COMMENT.

It becomes more evident each day that one flag is enough for this country—Lawrence Journal.

The Chicago police did just right in compelling those rampant anarchists to display the American flag at their revolutionary meeting.—Coca Herald.

Some of these days Chicago will have a lynching in comparison with which the hanging of the Mafia assassins at New Orleans will appear trivial.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

It is only a small red flag—a harmless piece of cloth—but that red flag represents a sentiment that is at war with everything that is distinctively American.—Kansas City Times.

The Chicago police are looking after the anarchists who seem to be growing bold again. It would seem that the last lesson should not have been so soon forgotten.—Peoria Transcript.

The insistence that the American flag be raised at a meeting of the anarchists in Chicago is a most commendable thing, it is to be hoped, will learn wisdom with experience.—Milwaukee News.

We do not apprehend much danger to American institutions from the anarchists as long as they confine their operations to the city limits of New York, for it is at that point that the city has shown its strength.—New Orleans Delta.

The red flag can be the symbol here of nothing but murder and robbery. People who want to keep green the memory of Spies and Parsons can hardly be held too strict in a post that has shown a flag of law and order.—New York World.

Dom Pedro. Dom Pedro is reported to be as "wild" as was the somewhat noted Mr. Hatfield.—Worcester Spy.

It really looks as though Dom Pedro would not only return to Brazil to die, but to reign some time before his death.—Los on News.

Dom Pedro has grown tired of being "out in the cold world," and is ready to return to Brazil, no matter how torrid it may be.—New York World.

THE MOON AND ITS MISTAKES.

There was an eclipse on the moon's surface, but not on the earth, and in some of its best work on the uncompleted part of the preceding—Washington Star.

The eclipse of the moon as advertised took place sure enough. Luna always keeps her engagements. But she doesn't pretend that she can guarantee the weather.—Utica Observer.

The eclipse passed off without our learned astronomers learning the secret of the moon's composition. The green sheeps' noses still hold sway.—Minneapolis Times.

The pale, inconstant moon disappointed Baltimore in her eclipse. The green clouds veiled her from view. Perhaps the ad was off flirting with Jupiter.—Baltimore Herald.

Chicago is growing because the clouds obscured its view of the eclipse. Everybody knows that the moon is on earth, and now it appears she wants the moon as well.—Toledo Blade.

When she was all ready for the eclipse the moon quietly drew her face behind a bank of gray clouds. It seemed an act of delicate shyness very worthy of pale Luna.—New York World.
