A new man can be made, out of one that's "used-up," bilious and dyspeptic. It's done by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It starts the torpid liver into healthful action, purifies and enriches the blood, cleanses, repairs, and strengthens the system, and restores health and vigor. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it sets at work all the processes of digestion and nutrition, and builds up flesh and strength. It's the only Blood and Liver Remedy that's guaranteed, in every case, to benefit or cure. If it doesn't do all that's claimed for it, the money is promptly refunded. But it keeps its promises—that's the reason it can be sold in this way.

"Discovery" strengthens Weak Lungs, and cures Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, and kindred affections. Don't be fooled into taking something else, said to be "just as good," that the dealer may make a larger profit. There's nothing at all like the "Discovery."

RUSSIA.

In Russia for a woman to lose her hair is a sign of disgrace, and yet the pressure of the famine is so great that many of the women are now cropping their hair and selling it, in order to obtain a few roubles with which to sustain life. In the meantime the famine is now accompanied by typhus fever, as is common in famine districts. This fever is contagious, and is slowly spreading. It is said that the reason for the famine is that the taxes were so heavy that the peasants were obliged to sell their seed corn, so that they had nothing to plant, and that the rascality of the Russian officials is the real reason for the trouble. A depleted condition of the system not only invites fever, but pulmonary complaints as well. If you feel run down and begin to cough, take REID'S GERMAN COUGH AND KIDNEY CURE, and you will soon overcome the foe. This great remedy is the best thing in the world for every form of lung trouble, commencing with a common cold and ending with consumption Be sure that your druggist gives you Reid's, and take no other.

DECEPTION.

This may look like poetry, but it Only demonstrates how easily the eye May be deceived. The ear is sometimes Deceived by the cry of "just as good"

By some druggists who, when Dr. White's Pulmonaria is called for, Use their persuasive powers to Induce you to take something else

On which they make a larger Profit, and should you allow their Sophistry to overcome your better Judgment, you will discover the Deception only after you have Used the stuff and found it Worthless. You will then mourn In vain the loss of your good Money, for there is no other Cough remedy as good as the Pulmonaria or that will cure a Cough as speedily and permanently.

Ancient Fiction Discounted.

The fairy story of the wonderful flail, with a charmed worm concealed in its handle, which at the bidding of its owner threshed away without anyone to wield it, and made a farmer who gained possession of it wealthy by working for him not only day by day, but through the night, while his neighbors and their hired men were asleep, has been paralleled by the device of an inventor of implements of naval warfare. The flail, it will be remembered, was useful not only as a tool, but also as a weapon, and when its rightful owner found a fellow trying to steal it, he turned it to belligerent account by pronouncing the words which set it at work, whereupon it pounded the thievish intruder black and blue, and drove him out of the barn.

The modern device is not a flail, but a pair of scissors, which are so constructed as to snip away automatically, and cut anything that comes between them. The inventor is an Englishman, Capt. Wilson, of Her Majesty's ship Vernon. The motive power is not an enchanted worm, but a purely mechanical contrivance, with no more magic about it than an eight-day clock.

In use, the scissors are attached to the nose of a submarine torpedo, which is sent forth upon its deadly mission toward warships belonging to the enemy that happen to be provided with the defensive contrivance known as steel crinoline, which has heretofore proven a perfect defense of ironclads against torpedoes. When torpedoes with the automatic scissors attachment strike a netting of this sort the scissors snip through the steel crinoline, making an entrance for the infernal machine behind them, which, passing through the netting without losing any perceptible proportion of its speed, explodes and blows the ironclad out of the water.

The fairy tale of science has become more marvelous than the fictions composed by the skalds and bards and story-tellers of our ancestors in their wildest flights of imagination.

Love of Nature's Beauty.

In spite of the alleged materialism of our people, it is plain that the love of natural beauty is stronger in the more ignorant classes than is common in the European nations. It is rare in Scotland, in Switzerland, in the Tyrol, to see the natives of the region on the mountain except for what may be called business purposes—that is, as hunters or as guides. They do not take their families and go up for a picnic simply for the pleasure of the thing, whereas the city visitor can hardly ascend an American mountain without finding a party of simple country people there before him. Grant that their demeanor is not wholly æsthetic—that they may carry a hammer and chisel to carve initials on the rocks, that they leave sardine boxes about, that they even play a game of cards on the very summit—no matter; they are there. The chances are that the expedition was proposed by the wife or daughter of the farmer or mechanic who nominally heads it, suggests T. W. Higginson, in Harper's Bazar. She has a firm conviction, brought from some earlier trip, that the top of the mountain is a "sightly place," and she is ready enough to contribute her best doughnuts and mince-pies for the collation. I know a farmer's daughter, living at the base of a mountain 3,000 feet high, who would think the summer wasted unless she went up several times for amusement. She knows every nook of it; her little parlor is full of dried butterflies and bird skins and odd tree mushrooms brought home by herself. She could go up or down the steep path by night as well as day, with no more sense of fear than when she drives herself five miles, one evening in every week, through the loneliest woods, to attend the Society for Christian Endeavor. "I should think you would be afraid," said an anxious city visitor. "Oh, no," she said, carelessly, "there is a very good road."

Men With Artificial Limbs.

A dealer in artificial limbs: Did it occur to you that in the big procession of veterans of the Grant unveiling ceremonies there were very few who had artificial arms or legs? I noticed it particularly, for it is a part of my business to watch these gatherings of old soldiers. I sent out three of my best men on the day alluded with instructions to give every man with an artificial leg or arm one of our circulars. The report which they brought back astonished me. Nearly all of the circulars were returned unused. I have noticed the same thing in a majority of gatherings of this character. It is strange but true that of all the men who fought in the awful conflict few lost their arms or legs. Many were wounded in those limbs, but as compared with the great number that were shot few lost a leg or an arm. My business shows that there are more artificial legs than arms. There are many men who have artificial legs who are able to conceal the fact, but I do not know of a man with an artificial arm who has ever fooled anybody with it. One reason, of course, is that we have not reached the same perfection in making artificial arms as in legs.—Chicago Tribune.

ORIGIN OF THE UMBRELLA.

It Was Probably First Used as a Protection from the Sun.

No one knows whether the umbrella was originally used as a defense against rain or as a screen from the sun; but it seems probable that the first umbrellas were sunshades. In countries where very little clothing is worn rain does not make much difference, but the sun is a power. Why shouldn't the palm-leaf be the first sunshade, with its ribs and handles to order? It hints at the umbrella as well as the fan.

Travelers among the Ainos of Japan often make temporary sunshades of gigantic dock leaves, which are sometimes six feet high; large enough for an account of Gulliver The umbrella has a very great antiquity. The word itself means a little shadow," showing that it was named for its protection from the sun in this case. Horace says:

"Among the military standards, the sun beholds an Egyptian canopy."

On coins and in the rock carvings of the ancients the umbrella often shows its familiar form. This goes to prove that Jonas Hanway did not invent the umbrella, but he saw the value of the Eastern sunshade, and soon it became the fashion to carry this article of apparel. There must be a great difference between the umbrella of the eighteenth century and the modern steel-ribbed, silk-covered, slender article which it is regarded as a misfortune to get wet.

The desideratum at present is a portable umbrella. There is a fortune for the man who invents a really good umbrella which can be stowed in a valise or trunk There is an unpatented Corean umbrella that may fill the bill When it begins to rain, the picturesque and stately Corean swell reaches into his sleeve and produces a folded oiled-paper affair resembling a fan. This is spread and set over the hat like an extinguisher, and is kept in place by two strings held under the chin It is not very large, but anything that will cover a fat an hat will keep the rain from a Corean

The Voice of the People

Reaches us—or should do so—through the ballot-box. This is the medium through which it ought to speak in clarion tones. But there are other means by which the people voice their sentiments, irrespective of politics, concerning matters of vital importance. Successful or unsuccessful are those popular admonitions as they are heard distinctly or faintly. But health, the grand desideratum, appeals to us all. The avenue is only cleared when the obstacles which bar its complete recovery are swept aside. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has for nearly a third of a century occupied the first rank among proprietary remedies for debility, dyspepsia, constipation, disorder of the liver and kidneys, and as an effectual means of conquering and preventing malarial complaints. Since the advent of "la grippe" it has also signalized itself as a cure of the complaint.

Why They Are Tough.

"Rest and fat are the greatest enemies of the horse" is a saying of the Arabs, and if every horse owner would embody its truth in his practice, there would be little need to write anything further on the subject. Its observances would be potent to improve the horse in health, strength, virility, endurance and longevity, and by "holding up the grass to nature, correct the irrational treatment and abnormal condition under which he is often reared.

Not that the conditions surrounding the horse in a state of nature should be wholly imitated, for they do not all tend to his improvement in the qualities adapted to man's use. But it is worthy of note that the wild horse is fough, sound and healthy, and making due allowance for the influence of natural selection of the survival of the fittest, when it is observed that he is seldom in a state of rest, that he lives unconfined in the open air, upon natural food, it may reasonably connect these as cause and effect, and safely consider exercise, pure air and simple diet the fundamental conditions upon which to build up, by skill in breeding and training, the highest and most perfect equine type.—Rider and Driver.

THERE is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. Two Things

In Regard to Catarrh

1st, It is a Constitutional Disease; and 2d, It Requires a Constitutional Remedy.

These two facts are now so well known to the medical fraternity that local applications like snuffs and inhalants, are regarded as at best likely to give only temporary relief. To effect a permanent cure of Catarrh requires a constitutional Remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which by purifying the blood, repairing the diseased tissues, and imparting healthy tone to the affected organs, does a thorough and lasting cure.

"I want to say that Hood's Sarsaparilla is a permanent cure for catarrh. After suffering with catarrh for many years, I was requested to take and after using three bottles I am healed of the most annoying disease the human system is heir to."—P. E. STOUT, Sheridan, Ind.
