

WAS FULL OF HORROR.

PARTICULARS OF THE DISASTER ON THE MONON.

Section Men Charge that They Had Vainly Applied for a Bail-Car...

Many Are Maimed.

In all truth the officials of the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago Railroad Company have said that the disaster which overtook their northbound passenger train north of Crawfordsville, Ind., was the worst in the history of the road.

The accident occurred at a place that is one of the most dangerous points in the Monon system. A mile and a half north of Crawfordsville the track crosses a deep ravine on a trestle some forty feet high.

A hundred yards before reaching the steepest point the train struck a broken rail. The engine passed over safely, but the first car, a mail coach, was derailed.

The car broke loose from each other, but followed the same until the awful declivity was reached. The mail car turned endwise and rolled down the hill.

The second car, a combination coach, carrying the baggage and the theatrical company, stayed right where it was on the track, not even leaving its side.

Three times the car turned completely over. The brakeman was fixing the fire at the time the car left the tracks, and the stove-door being open, the live coals flew everywhere among the many passengers.

Next to the smoker was the ladies' car, and in it the greatest mischief was done. As it started to roll down the steep decline, as the smoker had done before, it found a harder road to travel.

It found a harder road to travel. Directly in its path was the broken, jagged stump of a tree. The car struck this with terrific force, and the sharp, firmly set timber piercing the side instantly killed Mrs. Van Rokeby and Ben Hamburg.

For an instant after the cars had settled nothing was heard save the crackling flames and the roar of the splintered coaches.

sounded forth from the wreckage plentifully.

One of the victims, bleeding from many cuts, climbed the hill and started toward Crawfordsville, calling loudly for help. Farmers and men cutting ice in a stream near the wreck hurried to the rescue.

Another costly and almost equally horrible accident came near filling out a day of misfortune for the Monon. Just before midnight the wrecking-train pulled into Crawfordsville from the scene of the day's disaster.

It is now narrated that on one occasion a famous preacher of New England, with only the fear of God before him, came to King George of England, and he was kept waiting in an ante-room for a long, long time—so long, in fact, that endurance ceased to be a virtue and the good man in very bad humor left the place.

"My Friend Is Hungry."

There lived in Paris a man who had been wealthy, but who was reduced to poverty and was obliged to be a weekly applicant for alms from the poor fund of the parish.

"Do you live alone?" asked the curate. "As I have to do you," replied the man. "I have not a friend in the world."

"The poor man, much embarrassed, hesitated, then finally said: 'I have a dog, and he—poor fellow—is hungry too.'"

"Now, my dear sir," said the curate, "the parli fund is not for dogs. There is no objection to keeping one, surely, when people can afford it; but we can distribute food only to very poor persons; not dogs, no matter how poor or hungry they may be."

"The man's eyes filled with tears. 'He is all I have,' he said; 'my only comfort, my only friend, my only support, not, I am sure, I would rather starve with him.'"

"The kind priest put his hand in his pocket and said: 'I can't give you the parish money, but this is my own. Keep your dog, and go at once and buy him a good dinner.'—Ave Maria.
