MONUMENT TO GEN. M'CLELLAN.

A Noble Equestrian Statue Worthy of the Great Soldier.

A life-size equestrian statue of Gen. George B. McClellan, one of the finest equestrian works of bronze in this country, will be unveiled in Philadelphia on Sept. 17, 1892, the thirtieth anniversary of the battle of Antietam. It will be mounted upon a high, massive pedestal of granite, handsomely inscribed with bas-reliefs of bronze. The ceremonies attending the unveiling will be marked by an elaborate display, both State and national.

THE EQUESTRIAN STATUE OF GEN. GEORGE B. M'CLELLAN.

In conception the statue is striking and heroic, resembling closely that of General Thomas. The steed—modeled after the spirited animal ridden by "Little Mac" at Antietam—is pausing upon the crest of a gentle hillock. With head and ears erect, eyes and nostrils dilated, it stands trembling and straining every muscle as if sniffing the battle afar off.

Upon the charger sits the grim, stern soldier, the height of contrast to the fiery impatience of his steed, the dingy little army cap drawn down over his eyes, the immobile profile turned slightly over the left shoulder, the calm, firm features buried in that deep thoughtfulness—that impression of latent power and magnetism which won for him the devotion of all his officers and made him the acknowledged greatest organizer of the shattered armies of the Union.

AT THE TOP IN NEW YORK.

The Tower of Madison Square Garden—Three Hundred Feet from the Street.

The grandeur of the proportions of the Madison Square Garden, New York, may be inferred from the size of the figure of Diana, which serves as the finial vane of the structure and is about twenty feet high and a thousand pounds in weight. From the street to the brow of the goddess is a distance of about 340 feet, and the view from the tower, taken by visitors at an elevation of 300 feet from the sidewalk, is the most eligible of all the high places in the commercial metropolis. Before many weeks are past a clock, with a diameter of twenty-two feet, will be placed in the tower. At night it will be brilliantly illuminated, increasing the nocturnal glories of the building, which are absolutely unique in their splendor.

IRELAND'S CHIEF SECRETARY.

He Has Some Experience, Much Money, and is Said to Be Quite Popular.

Mr. Jackson, Ireland's new Chief Secretary, is a successful business man and is quite wealthy. He is engaged in the tanning business at Leeds, has an interest in worsted mills there and is a director in the Great Northern Railway. He was elected from Leeds in 1880, after a previous unsuccessful candidacy in 1876, and has held his seat ever since. In 1886 his appointment as Financial Secretary by Lord Salisbury caused some apprehension as to his ability to fill the place, together with some adverse comment, but his administration of the affairs of the office gave general satisfaction. He has been voted a success both at the Treasury and in the House, and is popular with members on both sides. His admission to the Cabinet, owing to the death of William Henry Smith, will make no difference in the number of members.

A LITCHFIELD man, who is looked up to, stands seven feet seven inches in his slippers.
