The Sermon Did Not Convert Him—Salvationist Booth's Methods Criticised—How the Situation Was Secured—Not Always Our Way—Skepticism, Etc.

Do You Love Jesus?

A CLERGYMAN spent a whole week preparing a sermon with special reference to one of his hearers, an infidel lawyer, who, from habit and traditional respect, regularly attended church, and had for some time sat under his ministry.

Sunday came, and with it a cold, icy storm, but Judge Levman sat in his accustomed place. Not a word of the sermon escaped him. After the benediction he walked quietly down the aisle. On the icy steps stood an old colored woman, lame and poor. As she attempted to go down, she slipped, and would have fallen, but the Judge, with the dignified courtesy that always distinguished him, assisted her till she had gained the sidewalk. Turning, as he supposed, to thank him, the old woman peered into his face with the inquiry, "Do you love Jesus?" Receiving no answer for an instant, she repeated, "Do you love Jesus?" and then hobbled away.

The lawyer went home, but the words followed him. He tried to read, but could not escape the trembling, pleading tone. He fought the impression till evening, and then sought the pastor's study to ask guidance and help.

Some weeks later, after he had found peace and united himself with the people of God, the minister said to him one day: "Do you know that I expected you that stormy evening when you first came to me to inquire concerning the way to eternal life? I had prepared my sermon that day especially for you, and I thought it would move you to conviction."

"That sermon!" replied the Judge, "it did not move me in the least. It was what the old negro women said, 'Do you love Jesus?' that I could not get away from. It seemed to me as if I should hear that voice following me as long as I lived."

Salvationist Booth.

A prominent member of a Greenpoint (N. Y.) church says "that the enterprise of Mr. Booth in England is bound to end in disaster. It is true he has snatched thousands of working men from the slums of London and other large cities, supplying them with both food, raiment, shelter and labor, both his methods are similar to those practiced in the State Prisons of America. He cheapens labor, thereby coming in conflict with artisans who have spent seven years of their lives serving an apprenticeship to the regular trades, and is thus, systematically, though surely, diminishing the rate of wages as well as foisting upon the public inferior workmanship. In other words," said he, "instead of diminishing he is increasing the number of paupers. He is driving from their home honest workingmen, who are unable to compete with an army of unemployed tramps, and if I am not much mistaken he will be opposed by the united trade societies of the country. Already thousands of persons have emigrated from London through Mr. Booth. The evil of pauperism cannot be eradicated by Mr. Booth's employment bureau; a starving public cannot subsist on prayers, no matter how honest, any more than it can derive healthy exhilaration from low songs, and the noise of drums and tambourines."

How He Got the Situation.

A young man went into the largest dry goods importing house in New York, and asked for a situation. He was told to come again.

Going down Broadway that same afternoon, opposite the Astor House, an old apple woman trying to cross the street, was struck by a stage, knocked down and her basket of apples sent scattering in the gutter. This young man stepped out from the passing crowd, helped up the old woman, put her apples into the basket, and went on his way, forgetting the incident. When he called again upon the importers he was asked to name his price, which was accepted, and he went to work.

Nearly a year afterward he was called aside one day and asked if he remembered assisting an old apple woman in Broadway to pick up a basket of apples, and to his surprise learned why he had obtained a situation when more than a hundred others were desiring the same place.

Young man, you little know who sees your acts of kindness. The eyes of others see and admire what they would not take the trouble to do themselves.—Presbyterian Record.

Skepticism.

Skepticism is simply not believing. It is denial, negation, darkness. There is only one cure for darkness, and that is coming to the light. If you will persist in putting your eyes out, or in barring God's daylight out, there is no help for you; you must die in the dark. She has made your soul sick, "and if you will not even try Christ's medicine, then the blood-poisoning of infidelity will run its fatal course. If you will produce a better rule of life than my Bible (perhaps your mother's Bible also), if you will find a holier pattern of living than Jesus Christ, and a surer Saviour than He is, I will agree to forswear my religion for yours. But what is yours "I do not believe" in comparison with my positive "I know whom I have believed?" What is your denial in comparison with my personal experience of Christ? Skepticism never won a victory, never slew a sin, never healed a heart-ache, never produced a ray of sunshine, never saved an immortal soul. It is foredoomed defeat. Do not risk your eternity on that spider's web.—T. L. Cuyler.

Speaking In Haste.

It is related of a clergyman that once when a member of his congregation came to him with a grievance against a sister woman, he listened quietly to her vituperation of the offender although he kept on with his writing. When he had finished he handed her a sheet of paper with the request that she read and sign it.

But she recoiled in dismay. Her own words of hate and anger confronted her, and seemed so terrible, thrown thus into permanent shape, that she desisted from her purpose, and went away with a new spirit of forgiveness and forbearance born within her.

What a grand thing it would be for hasty tempered individuals if Mr. Edison or some other scientist would invent a sort of "reflectograph"—a machine that would take our words as we uttered them, and reproduce them in large letters before our eyes! Would there not be then many a barbed epithet checked on the tongue, thus saving much heart burning and many wounded spirits?

Not Always Our Way.

God does not always answer our prayers as we ask and as we desire, but He never fails to do the best thing for us under the circumstances. He does not always remove the evils, but He always gives us grace to overcome them. He did not take the three Hebrews out of the furnace of fire, but He came down and walked with them so that the fire should not hurt them, even its smell upon their garments. He did not prevent Daniel's going into the den of lions, but He sent His angels to close their mouths so that they could not hurt him. He did not even in answer to prayer remove Paul's thorn in the flesh, but He did what was far better, gave him sufficient grace to sustain him. So, let us remember that our most severe conflicts and trials may be God's emory wheel, on which He proposes to make us polished stones to shine forever in the kingdom of His dear Son.—Christian Witness.

Gems from Richter.

LIFE is a beautiful night which as one star goes down another rises.

EVERY virtuous and wise being is in himself a proof of immortality.

WE carry and lock up a Heaven of starry light within our breasts.

THAT tenderest, kindest angel of the last hour, whom we harshly call death.

THE stars burn as altar lights in the great temple of the night.

High Stepping.

A well-known firm of opticians in London manufacture specially constructed spectacles to be worn by horses. The object is to promote "high stepping." Horse spectacles, we learn, are made of stiff leather, quite inclosing the eyes of the horse, and the glasses employed are deep concave and large in size. The effect is to give the ground in front of the horse the effect of being raised; the animal, therefore, steps high, thinking he is going up hill or has to step over an obstruction in front of him. If the system is persevered with when the animal is young the effect is said to be marvelous. Many horses, it is alleged, could be materially improved by a visit to the optician, and it is recommended that the sight of all horses should be tested. This particularly applies to valuable hunters, which are found optically unfit for their work, when a little artificial assistance would make them as useful as ever. Apart from this consideration, many vices, it is believed, might be cured by means of eyeglasses. The cause of shying is as a rule, short sight.

Fat and Thin.

Fat people are less able to resist the attacks of disease or the shock of injuries and operations than the moderately thin. In ordinarny everyday life they are at a decided disadvantage; their respiratory muscles cannot so easily act; their heart is handicapped by the deposit on it, and the least exertion throws them into a perspiration. This last is curiously misunderstood; it is almost universally looked upon as an actual "melting" of the subcutaneous fat, and is considered to be nature's method of getting rid of the superfluity But this is not correct, for, in spite of its greasy appearance, sweat only contains a trace of fatty matter, rarely more that .01 per cent., and this comes, of course, from the cells of the sudoriparous glands, and primarily from certain constituents in the blood. A person whose limbs and body are covered with adipose tissue is in the position of a man carrying a heavy burden and too warmly clothed.

ONE of the popular superstitions of the negro of ante-bellum days was that if a honeysuckle had forced its way through the chinks of the cabin and was growing inside, as it often did, it was a sure indication that they had not led upright lives. "Why, bress your soul, mis," said Uncle Edmund, once a servant in the famous Oglethorpe family of Georgia, "I war foolin' mas'r an' lendin' myself to the devil w'en dat dar t'ing crep' in; den bloons ain't sweet to me! Bittah' dan dat apple old Eve gabe to Adam. Go way, honeysuckl!"

LOOK TO YOUR LEGS.

Not Exercising Our Lower Limbs Enough, They Are Shriveling Up.

We are growing deficient in legs, says a writer in the Pittsburg Dispatch. I don't mean that we are legless, but that our lower limbs are rapidly becoming mere rudimentary members for lack of proper exercise. When a quick flash of horse-car bell was heard in the towns, citizens walked little; and now that the various rapid transit systems are in operation, the citizens walk less. The results of much riding and little walking are apparent in nine men out of ten met upon the streets. Spindle shanks, weak, uncertain steps, and a general air of weariness mark the patrons of the street-car. This state of affairs is not due entirely to the great American desire for speed. Laziness, pure and simple, is to blame. No matter how much time a man may have, and no matter how fair the day may be, if he has more than a quarter of a mile to go he rides. He rides to his work in the morning, and the suggestion that he start earlier and walk would be received with scorn. He rides home from his work in the evening, and more or less cheerfully accepts the discomforts of a car crowded with fellow-resters. When he arrives home, he wonders why he has no appetite, and tells his wife that she cannot cook like his mother could. Sundays and holidays are spent in the house, with never a thought of a five-mile tramp and its attendant benefits. In consequence, his legs shrivel up to pipestem proportions, his liver hardens, and his head grows soft. Finally he takes his last ride—to the cemetery—as much a suicide as the man who shoots himself. So out into the air, and walk out, too. Legs were not made to be bent or bear a lapstone during the major portion of their service. They were made to carry you, and, on certain occasions, carry the one you love next to your own sweet self. Use your legs and lengthen your life.

Here It Is.

To the man who labors with his hands, physical trouble is a very serious thing. It is not merely the pain he endures, racking and tormenting as it is, but the prospective loss of time, money, and place haunts him and aggravates his suffering. He is bent on having prompt relief and sure cure. He wants the best and the proof, and here it is: —Mr. W. H. Schroeder, Gilbertville, Iowa, stated, April 10, 1884, that he had used St. Jacobs Oil in his stables for horse complaints and upon himself for rheumatism, and had found it the best remedy he had ever tried. Again, February 11, 1887, he writes: "I have used St. Jacobs Oil for rheumatism and sore back, as stated, and it cured; and for burns and bruises it does its work as recommended to do. I always keep it in the house and recommend it to my neighbors."—Mr. John Garbutt, 636 Minna St., San Francisco, Cal., writes: "Some time back I sprained my knee and suffered agony until I tried St. Jacobs Oil. The result was a speedy and permanent cure."—Miss Ida M. Fleming, 7 S. Carey St., Baltimore, Md., says: "I had been afflicted for two years with neuralgia, and tried every means to get rid of the tormenting disease. I had been given so much quinine that my nervous system was seriously injured. I was advised to use St. Jacobs Oil, which I did, and it relieved me entirely."

Spruce Gum.

A local paper says that the spruce gum season is on in Maine and business is booming. One firm received twenty-four barrels, or about two and one-half tons, of gum in one day, and it will have 125 barrels, or 25,000 pounds, before the close of the season. The first grade of gum is clean and clear and ready for chewing. It sells wholesale at 60 cents to $1 a pound. The dark-colored gum, mixed with bark and pitch, is worth from 6 to 18 cents a pound, and is purchased by refiners, who boil it, skim off the dirt, add some other things and produce many varieties of spruce flum.

Dead Sea Fruits.

They slay multitudes when they are the product of neglect of incipient disease. A "slight" cold, a fit of indigestion, biliousness or constipation, each or any of these routine ailments, advance in many cases with "league-destroying strides." Give them a swift, early defeat with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters and avert the danger. Abernethy administered an alarming rebuke to the man who informed him that he had "only a cold!" "Only a cold," repeated the Doctor. "What would ye have—the plague!" Rheumatism and la grippe are easily extinguishable at the start. Why then allow them to get up a full head of steam? Put on the breaks with the Bitters. The genial warmth which this superb medicine diffuses through the system, the impetus it gives to the circulation of the blood, the promotion of digestion being effect upon the nervous, specially recommend it to the enfeebled and sick. 'Tis the great specific for malaria.

Holiday Amusements.

Venezuela has fifty-six holidays every year. On these days the people close their stores and enjoy themselves in chicken fights

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen—I have been in the general practice of medicine for most forty years, and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions. Yours truly,

L. L. GORSUCH, M. D.,

FINE PENMANSHIP.

It Is Often a Disadvantage to a Young Man.

There are many bad habits against which young men entering business life are warned, but there is one that has never been mentioned, but which keeps men down almost as much as liquor. I refer to the habit of writing a good hand. School teachers and parchin boils think they are doing their duty in teaching boys to become fine penmen, but as a matter of fact they are often ruining their chances for life. If a good penman occupies a clerical position the chances are very great that he will never rise any higher. Merchants like to see their books neatly kept, and if a man satisfies them in this respect, are very reluctant to remove him. With a bad penman the case is different. They would be glad to have a better one in his place, and when an opening for promotion occurs the poor writer will, in most instances, be chosen to fill the place. My advice to a young man would be this: As soon as you have established your position in a firm, begin to deteriorate in your penmanship and make yourself useful in other ways. If you do you will probably be advanced, but if you are so foolish as to write a copperplate hand, make up your mind to stick to your books forever. Never write a better hand than you absolutely have to.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Ladies.

The pleasant effect and perfect safety with which ladies may use the California liquid laxative Syrup of Figs, under all conditions, makes it their favorite remedy. To get the true and genuine article, look for the name of the California Fig Syrup Co., printed near the bottom of the package.

Talmage on Novels.

People constantly write to me and ask: "Do you believe in women reading novels?" My friends, it all depends upon the novel, writes T. De Witt Talmage, in his department in the Ladies' Home Journal. Some novels are exhilarating, but a greater percentage of them seem to me to belong more to the literary men and women of the past than of the present. Some of our modern novels are appalling in their influence. But as one young girl writes me: The heroes are so adroitly knavish, and the persons so bewitchingly untrue, and the turn of the story so exquisite, and all the characters so enrapturing, I cannot quit them." My sister, you can find styles of literature just as charming that will elevate and purify, and ennoble, and Christianize while they please. The devil does not own all the honey. There is a wealth of good books coming from our publishing houses that leaves no excuse for the choice of that which is debauching to body, mind and soul. Go to some intelligent man or woman and ask for a list of books that will be strengthening to your mental and moral condition. Life is so short and your time for improvement so abbreviated, that you cannot afford to fill up with husks, and cinders, and debris.

CHICAGO.
Chicago has captured the Democratic national convention in spite of the fact that nine other cities wanted it. This speaks volumes for the advantages which Chicago offers. It gained it largely because the delegates thought that that city contains more hotel accommodations than any other. Chicago is an example of what persistent energy will do. This is illustrated in REID'S GERMAN COUGH AND KIDNEY CURE, a remedy that only needs to be used in order to recommend itself. It will cure the worst description of lung trouble or kidney complaint. These two maladies are oftener connected than people generally believe—in fact, the lungs cannot be affected without throwing additional work upon the kidneys. A great many people suffer in this way for years without knowing what ails them, when they might be cured by the exercise of a little discretion. REID'S GERMAN COUGH AND KIDNEY CURE will heal all lung troubles and all maladies arising from inactivity of the kidneys. Get it of any dealer.
