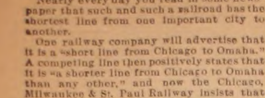
The Shortest Route.

Nearly every day you read in some newspaper that such and such a railroad has the shortest line from one important city to another.

One railway company will advertise that it is a short line from Chicago to Omaha." A competing line then positively states that it is "a shorter line from Chicago to Omaha than any other," and now the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway insists that it is "the shortest line from Chicago to Omaha," and proves it by this map:



The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company also says that it is the "best line to St. Paul and Minneapolis," which is a fact, with "electric lighted trains" and reading lamps in each berth, so that one can read all night long if he has a book and doesn't want to sleep. It brags about the "finest dining cars in the world," with the best of meals served on imported china by the most expert and civil colored waiters, at 75 cents, while the lines east of Chicago charge a whole dollar.

And—once more—the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway opens up a new through car line from Chicago to Denver, via Omaha and Lincoln, and it isn't long before the whole world says to itself that "shortest line from Chicago to Omaha," that "best line to St. Paul and Minneapolis" and that "new route to Denver" must be the only first-class railroad in the western part of the United States, and what the whole world says must be true.

The address of the passenger agent in Chicago is 207 Clark street, and everybody who wishes to travel over the best road in the West goes there to purchase tickets and secure sleeping car reservations.

Put Him in the Soup.

An animal growing between the high and low water marks on the Japanese coasts is a mud worm called sabella. It occupies a hard, limy tube of its own making, and gets its food when the high tide comes up over its hiding place by thrusting out a head busy with tentacles and sucking in currents of water loaded with minute particles of nutriment. Out of this wriggling creature the shore people make a soup which is true vermicelli, not a paste imitation of "little worms," and is said to taste as badly as it smells.

Making Glad the Waste (Waist) Places.

"That's what I call making glad the waist places," said Smithson, as he put his arm around a lady's waist. But Lilly won't care much for this show of affection if Smithson doesn't get rid of that disagreeable catarrh of his. Won't somebody tell him that Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will cure him.

By its mild, soothing, antiseptic, cleansing and healing properties, Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures the worst cases of Chronic Catarrh in the Head, as thousands can testify. "Cold in the Head" is cured with a few applications. Catarrhal Headache is relieved and cured as if by magic.

In perfect faith, the makers of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy—the World's Dispensary Medical Association, of Buffalo, N. Y., offer to pay $500 to any one suffering from Chronic Catarrh in the "head whom they cannot cure.

Now, if the conditions were reversed—if they asked you to pay $500 for a positive cure you might hesitate. Here are reputable men, with years of honorable dealing; thousands of dollars and a great name back of them.

They believe in themselves. Isn't it worth a trial? Isn't any trial preferable to catarrh?

GRANT'S FAME IN STONE

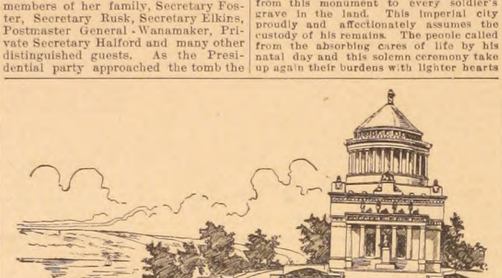
NEW YORK HAS BEGUN ITS MONUMENT.

Ceremonies of a Most Elaborate and Imposing Character—President Harrison Wields the Golden Trowel—Appearance of the Completed Monument.

Honor to Gen. Grant.

The corner-stone of the nation's monument to Gen. U. S. Grant in Riverside Park, New York, was laid with becoming ceremonies. The weather was all that could be desired, a cloudless sky, bright sunshine, tempered by a moderate breeze blowing over the Hudson River. Long before the time fixed for the dedication ceremonies the immense grand stand, erected in close proximity to where the monument will stand and partly surrounding the corner-stone, began to fill with those who had been invited and had tickets, and by noon it was computed that there were fully eight or nine thousand persons on the stand. The large number of ladies, in their bright and showy spring costumes, heightened the already brilliant spectacle. This crowded stand, with about three thousand veterans of the G. A. R. formed in line around and about the resting-place of their dead hero, with the charming scenery along the Hudson River and the Palisades in the distance, formed a picture which has seldom if ever been surpassed if equaled.

Shortly after noon the Presidential party, escorted by Troop A, of the National Guard of New York, left the Fifth Avenue Hotel and proceeded to Riverside Park. In the carriages were President Harrison, Mrs. Grant and members of her family, Secretary Foster, Secretary Rusk, Secretary Elkins, Postmaster General Wanamaker, Private Secretary Halford and many other distinguished guests. As the Presidential party approached the tomb the United States Band played "Hail to the Chief," while heads were uncovered, handkerchiefs waved and the immense throngs shouted their huzzas.



VIEW OF THE COMPLETED TOMB.

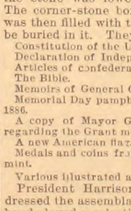
After a few moments' quiet Rev. Dr. John Hall offered up a prayer, which was listened to by all in deferential silence. The President of the Grant Monument Association, General Horace Porter, then delivered an address detailing in brief the doings of the association and their status since the inception of the project.

The event of the day was the laying of the corner stone by President Harrison. After putting mortar around the stone with a gold trowel that Superintendent Brady had made for the occasion, the stone was lowered into position. The corner-stone box, made of copper, was then filled with the relics which will be buried in it. They were:

Constitution of the United States.
Declaration of Independence.
Articles of confederation.
The Bible.
Memoirs of General Grant.
Memorial Day pamphlet, May 30 and 31, 1886.
A copy of Mayor Grant's proclamation regarding the Grant monument.
A new American flag.
Medals and coins from the United States mint.
Various illustrated and daily papers.

President Harrison then briefly addressed the assemblage, after which the band played a selection of national airs. Chauncey M. Depew then stood up, giving the audience the signal for another tremendous outburst of cheering.

Mr. Depew began by declaring that the predominant sentiment of General Grant was his family and his home. He shrank from display all his life, and would have preferred being buried by the side of his father and mother, but appreciating the claim of his countrymen upon his memory, he chose New York as his final resting-place, because it was the metropolis of the country. He made but one condition, and that was that his loyal wife should be buried by his side. He would have no monument, however grand, which would separate him from her during the unnumbered years of the hereafter. Continuing, the orator said:



CHAUNCEY M. DEPEW.

New York, in accepting this bequest of General Grant, has assumed a sacred trust. Upon no municipality and its citizens was ever devolved a more solemn duty. From the tenderest motives, he took from the national government the task which it would most loyally and lovingly have performed, and intrusted it to this great city. The whole country are enlisted in the army of reverence and sorrow, but he appointed New York the guard of honor. Let the monument which will rise upon this cornerstone be worthy of the magnitude of the metropolis and the grandeur of the subject. General Grant needs no stately shaft or massive pile to perpetuate his memory. The republic is his monument, and its history during what must always be its most critical time. Interesting period will be the story of his deeds.

Mr. Depew then sketched General Grant's career, and summed up his character as follows:

No man can be truly great unless he is also magnanimous. Grant was the most self-sacrificing of friends and the most generous of foes. "Unconditional surrender. I move immediately on your works," were the conditions Grant offered Buckner at Donelson, but in the darkness of the night he entered the prisoner's tent and said: "Buckner, you must have lost everything; take my purse." He had been for months making unheard of efforts to break through the confederate lines, but after the surrender of their defenders he refused to go within them. The failure to capture the confederate capital had exhausted the resources and impaired the reputation of all the generals who had preceded him, but when it lay prostrate at his feet he sternly declined the triumph of an entry at the head of his victorious army.

It was difficult to win his confidence, but when once gained, his heart, his efforts, and his fortune were at command. Neither secrets nor open enemies, neither direct charges nor anonymous revelations could disturb his friendship for anyone he had once trusted. To Sherman and Sheridan he gave unstinted praise. He was supremely free from envy or jealousy, so enthusiastic in his admiration of these lieutenants, that he awarded to them the larger share of credit for the ultimate triumph of the Union cause. But these same qualities, so creditable to his ingenuous and generous nature, became the chief sources of his mistakes and troubles when he was treading with untrained steps amid the quicksands of political and business life.

The culminating triumph of Gen. Grant was that he received and returned the sword of Lee. The one act typified the victory and perpetuity of the Union and the other that its defenders forever after would be those who with equal and unequaled courage had fought to save and to destroy it.

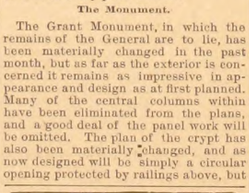
Grant's claims upon the gratitude of his countrymen are many. He will have peculiar remembrance for having, with President Lincoln, immediately recognized that the republic must live as the fathers had founded it. The most brilliant jewels in his crown of glory will be that, though a conqueror in the field, he counseled through life, and advised with his pen when in his last hours his voice had failed, peace and reconciliation among his countrymen, and that, though a soldier President, he successfully demonstrated the justice and wisdom of settling disputes among nations not by war, but by arbitration.

The tendrils of loyalty and love stretch from this monument to every soldier's grave in the land. This imperial city proudly and affectionately assumes the custody of his remains. The people called from the absorbing cares of life by his natal day and this solemn ceremony take up again their burdens with lighter hearts and brighter hopes for their children and their children's children because of the career and the deeds of Ulysses S. Grant.

On resuming his seat it was several minutes before quiet could be restored, the repeated shouting and clapping of hands being almost deafening. Dr. John Hall then pronounced the benediction, and the services ended by the firing of a salute of twenty-one guns from the United States ship Minnetonomah, stationed in the Hudson. The ceremony was marked as being without pomp or ostentation; in fact, such a one as the deceased general would have desired. There was no marked martial display, but here and there in the crowd was a sprinkling of officers of the army and navy. The whole ceremony was civil from every point of view.

The Monument.

The Grant Monument, in which the remains of the General are to lie, has been materially changed in the past month, but as far as the exterior is concerned it remains as impressive in appearance and design as at first planned. Many of the central columns within have been eliminated from the plans, and a good deal of the panel work will be omitted. The plan of the crypt has also been materially changed, and as now designed will be simply a circular opening protected by railings above, but without the ornamental work first planned for the sides.



IN THE CRYPT.

The designer of the monument, Mr. John H. Duncan, has reluctantly made the changes advocated in the line of economy, and expressed himself grateful for the fact that the liberality of the subscribers has permitted the exterior of the monument to remain practically unchanged, but for some slight modifications at the southern entrance.

It is now about seven years since the death of Gen. Grant, and during that time the movement for the erection of this monument has been going on slowly. It took six years to collect the first $150,000—less than half the amount needed—and it has taken the reorganized committee little over six weeks to secure the collection of the remainder.

Never in the history of similar movements has work undertaken under such disheartening circumstances been so enthusiastically and successfully concluded, and the praise must go to Gen. Horace Porter and his splendidly managed departments.

The Medium of Contagion in Influenza.

Dr. Pfeiffer, Prof. Koch's son-in-law, who has discovered the influenza bacillus, says he believes that the sputum of persons suffering from influenza is the medium of contagion in that disease. Dr. Pfeiffer presented a report on his discovery at the meeting of the doctors in the New York Charity Hospital. He said that he had discovered minute bacilli in the sputum of twenty-four patients suffering from influenza, and that he had inoculated monkeys and rabbits with a cultivation of the organism, with positive results. Dr. Canon, of the City Hospital, also made a report. He had examined twenty patients, and had discovered bacilli in the blood of seventeen. Prof. Koch examined the specimens and the methods of investigation pursued by the two doctors, and established the identity of their results.—American Analyst.

Across the Footlights.

Even the immortal and ever blooming Fanny Herring is not safe from the slings and arrows of the outrageous gallery god.

This type of auditor is bad enough in the popular price theaters, but when he lands in the amusement hall of the local dime museum his behavior is something terrific.

Fanny only acts in the latter places, and her plays are short, shocking and delirious. Recently she was appearing in one of an ultra blood and thunder brand in which it was necessary for her to exclaim: "Ter-ri-reat Hevins! If I only had a horse!"

She exclaimed it.

"Say, Fanny," queried a voice from the rear of the house, "would a mule do?"

"Yes," was the retort, "come around to the stage door!"—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Decisive Blow for Freedom

From the tyrannical yoke of those despotic ailments, dyspepsia, constipation and liver complaint, is struck when the quandom victim of their galling supremacy has taken a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Then they vanish defeated, and health resumes its welcome sway. Such is the invariable experience of those who use the ruling alterative to get rid of these associate evils. Anti-dyspeptics, cholagogues, drastic cathartics are as the sands of the sea, numberless and—useless. The happy blending of remedial properties, derived from Nature's botanic storehouse, with a pure, modified spirituous basis existent in the Bitters, not only initiates but effectuates the joint cure of chronic indigestion, irregularity of the bowels and perversion of the bile. The surest defense against malaria is this agreeable fortifier and preservative of health under unfavorable atmospheric conditions. It counteracts a tendency to rheumatism, rouses the kidneys and by added vigor from inaction, and endows a debilitated, nervous invalid with vigor. Incomparable as a tonic.

Business.

A very romantic marriage lat ly took place in Montgomery County, North Carolina. A young man obtained the license, secured the preacher and took him immediately to the presence of his intended. He found her in the kitchen making up dough. The young fellow did not give her time to clean her hands and arms, but had the preacher tie the knot at once. The preacher made quick work of it and sent them on their way rejoicing.

THIS is essentially an age of advancement and perhaps in no directions have greater advances been made than in medical science. Diseases that until recently were pronounced by the highest medical authority to be incurable are now found to yield readily to the discoveries of modern medical skill. This statement is amply borne out by the article appearing elsewhere in this issue under the heading of "The Saratoga Miracle" and would seem to indicate that one of the most perfect medical preparations of modern times is embodied in the remedy known as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

Curious.

A South African mining journal says the surfaces of numerous bowlders have been polished by the constant rubbing of countless herds of big game, such as the wildebeest. These examples of the attrition of rocks by animals are found in a good many parts of the Transvaal.

Money In This Pig.

A woman in Bucksport, Me., while feeding a small pig, dropped in the pen a roll of money—$20 in gold coin and $50 in notes. The coin was found subsequently near the mangled remains of a $10 note, but it was evident that the pig had swallowed the rest of the money.

Going Backward.

The population of Bogota, the capital of the United States of Colombia, decreased 854 during 1891. There were 2,305 births and 3,159 deaths in the city during the year. Emigration and immigration are not factors in the city's economy.

Dyspepsia

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, MASS.:

"A year ago this last fall I commenced to fail rapidly, lost all appetite and ambition, and barely dragged along with my work. During the winter and spring had to have help about my housework. Physicians did not help me, and I got more and more discouraged. I suffered from dyspepsia so that I or meat, and at last so that I could not even use butter on my toast. Used to dip the toast in tea, and even then it would distress my stomach. In the spring I hired a girl permanently, my health was so poor. She tried to persuade me to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, as a lady for whom she had worked had been greatly benefited by it. She said: 'It will only cost a dollar to try it.'

I Dragged Along
