Gone mad—

the person with bad blood who's not taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. You are bereft of judgment and good sense if you allow your blood to get out of order, your liver sluggish—life dull, everything blue, for you may soon find out that you're in the grave—or next to it —because you did not procure the G. M. D. soon enough, and some dread disease, may be influenza or consumption, may be typhoid or malarial fever, has taken you. Consumption is Lung Scrofula. For Scrofula in its myriad forms, and for all Liver, Blood and Lung diseases, the "Discovery" is an unequaled remedy. Everybody, now and then, feels "run-down" "played-out,"—with no power to generate vitality, in fact, just too sick to be well. That's where the right kind of medicine comes in, and the "Discovery" does for a dollar what the doctor wouldn't do for less than five or ten.

We claim that nothing like it has been discovered for a blood-purifier. It's guaranteed by the makers. Your money is returned if it doesn't benefit or cure you.

MANY MEN SHOT DOWN.

LABOR TROUBLES CULMINATE IN BLOODSHED.

Bloody Battle at Carnegie's Homestead Mills—Many Wounded on Both Sides—Workmen in Possession of the Plant—Hostilities Not Ended.

Civil War in Pennsylvania.

Homestead (Pa.) special:

Carnegie's managers attempted to land Pinkerton men at the Homestead works on Wednesday morning. The attempt was resisted by the locked-out men, and a battle with guns ensued, in which thirty-eight men are reported to have been killed and many more injured.

Three hundred Pinkerton men armed with Winchesters were brought from

ANDREW CARNEGIE.

Pittsburg in barges in the light of the early morning. The strikers had been advised of their coming, and had gathered with their friends to the number of 5,000 on the landing when the barge arrived. The Pinkertons were advised from the shore not to attempt landing. They persisted, and as one of their number started down the gang plank he fired his gun. The shot was answered by the strikers, and a fusillade ensued which lasted for half an hour.

After the first fusillade the boats withdrew from the shore, and desultory firing was kept up on both sides for several hours. During this time the strikers secured a cannon, and, planting it on the opposite side of the river, placed the guards between two fires.

About 10 o'clock the men on the barges made another attempt to land, and a desperate battle followed, in which rifles in the hands of the strikers and Pinkerton men and the cannon did terrible execution. While this fight was in progress the strikers poured oil into the river above the barges and set it on fire. The boats were soon surrounded by flames, and caught fire in several places. The guards were unable to withstand this new element, and finally at 11 o'clock they were forced to withdraw and return to Pittsburg.

Hosts Gather for Defense.

"They come. The Pinkertons are coming!" shouted a horseman riding at lightning speed as he dashed into Homestead at 1 o'clock in the morning and alarmed the leaders of the strikers at their headquarters. The secret signals, long ago planned and arranged, were set working and from both sides of the Monongahela River answering responses came. The story of the fall of Warsaw might be written again. "To arms to protect our homes!" cried 3,000 strikers and nearly as many men, women and children. Slowly came the steamer Little Bill towing two model barges loaded with 350 Pinkerton coal and iron police, Winchester rifles and an abundance of ammunition.

The scene on shore was thrilling. The thousands of people were assembled on the bank of the river on the Homestead side. As the boat moved up the crowd followed. It arrived opposite the big Carnegie mills, passed up and then backed down toward the landing. Fearless stalwarts, used to hardship, knew that the vessels were approaching shore.

The dock was fenced in to the river's edge; the invaders must be stopped. One leader cried, "Follow me," and, rushing to a part of the fence back from the river, attacked it. In a twinkling a breach was made in "Fort Frick" and 2,500 people crowded through the property down to the river and stood waiting for the approaching boats. Before they penetrated the mist several volleys were fired, not at the vessels, but as a warning. Presently the dark hulls showed through the white veil of fog and swung into the landing. There was breathless silence. Like ants thousands of the sons of Vulcan swarmed the bank to the water's edge. Capt. Heinde, of the Pinkertons, raised a plank from the deck of the barge nearest the shore. One of his men also grasped the big board, and one end was shoved ashore. Then there was a shout as of Spartans at the Tiber. One man stepped on the plank and went ashore. He was grabbed by the crowd and was seen no more. Captain Heinde followed. He had taken one step on the plank when he fell with a shot in the leg. The men behind him turned their Winchesters on the crowd and like a whirring of bees were the volleys which passed.

Twenty-three Shot.

Five Pinkerton men fell, one fatally shot through the head. The strikers lost six killed and twelve wounded, but the boats were repulsed and withdrew into mid-stream.

It was all over so quickly that not until the boats returned to the shelter of the fog did the strikers realize the damage done their fellows. Never more scintillating fire shot from the eyes of demons. Utterly reckless and frenzied the howitzers were ordered ready, and barrels of oil were loaded on a barge, to be fired and sent against the boats.

Slowly the craft returned. The firing was renewed and returned from the boats, and again numbers of the strikers fell. Then came the grand coup of the strikers. The gun on the little yacht Edna was turned against the craft and one on shore belched its fire upon its human freight.

Blazing Oil Sent Down Stream.

Finally oil was liberated from the barrels above by the men and was fired. The fiery track was not broad enough, and with a little shifting the blazing stream passed harmlessly by. This failure to cause retreat added to the anger of the strikers, and, towing their scows into proper position, they broke in the heads of the barrels, fired the oil, and sent the craft down on the boats. The men now have complete possession of the works, and unless Gov. Pattison orders out troops they will continue in possession.

First Victory for Strikers.

The first battle occurred about 4:30, when a force of about 300 Pinkerton men attempted to land at the steel works. The strikers had been apprised of their departure from Pittsburg, and for two hours before the boats arrived between 5,000 and 6,000 persons awaited their coming on the river banks. The mills have a landing for boats within the inclosure of the fence, and at first it appeared that there would be no way to prevent the Pinkertons entering the mills. Shortly before the boats reached Homestead a horseman riding at full gallop spread the alarm that the Pinkertons were coming. As the boats steamed toward the landing it was impossible to longer restrain the crowd. With a whoop and a yell of derision an onslaught was made on the fence and 100 feet of the inclosure was torn away and 1,000 men were at the landing. As the Pinkertons landed they opened fire and two workmen dropped in their tracks. This enraged the crowd, and they bore down upon the Pinkertons with resistless force, driving them back to the boats.

A ten-pound cannon has been planted in the main entrance to the mill. The situation is now quiet, though the battle is likely to be renewed at any moment.

Gov. Pattison has been appealed to for aid, and the State militia will probably be sent to the scene at once.

Defenses at the Steel Works.

About six weeks ago, in anticipation of the coming conflict between the Carnegie interests and the workmen, a stout board fence twelve feet high was built upon a foundation of slag three feet high, completely surrounding the steel works. This fence is three miles long. On the top are strung three strands of barbed wire, so connected that a current of electricity may be sent through them from the electric plant by the simple turning of a switch in the office. Portholes four inches in diameter have been bored along this fence at the height of a man's eye. Trenches have been dug over all parts of the works to various points along the fence where hydrants are stationed. Connections have been made so that either cold or boiling hot water can be sent through these pipes to the hydrants.

An additional fence has been built about the office, and a bridge forty feet high has been strung across the tracks, connecting the office with a building inside the works. A search light has been placed upon this bridge, and also a sentry box.

On the river front the Carnegie steel launch Annie has been fitted out as a warship, with swivel guns, and several flatboats have been equipped with small howitzers and search lights.

An Institution that Makes Its Patrons Happy.

The weary traveler who happens to land in Fort Wayne, Ind., should not fail to write his name upon the register of the Wayne Hotel. That new and elegant hostelry is owned and operated by one of the best known landlords in the West, W. M. McKinney. Under his personal supervision the "Wayne" is recognized by the traveling community as equal in every respect to any metropolitan hotel in the country. Everything about it has an air of home comfort. The rooms are pleasant and extremely neat, and the cuisine is unsurpassed. Every person that stops at the "Wayne" has only words of praise for the house and its genial proprietor, "Billy" McKinney. It is an institution of which the citizens may well be proud, as it would be a credit to any city. If you ever expect to visit the metropolis of Northern Indiana, make a note of this and give the "Wayne" a call. You will not regret it.

Making the Hills Tremble.

Who would suppose that a hill could be made to vibrate and tremble like a bell, and that such vibrations would last for hours after the cause which produced them had ceased to act? Yet this appears to be true.

Of course, in comparing a hill to a bell it is not intended to suggest that the extent of the vibrations in the two cases is comparable, but simply that the hill may continue to tremble in a manner similar to that in which the vibrations of a bell are prolonged.

A writer in Nature relates that a slight earthquake shock which occurred at Rome last February set the hill on which the observatory of Rocedi Papa stands into a state of vibration which lasted for many hours. It should not be understood that this was a shaking of the hill which could be perceived by ordinary means. But a pendulum plainly showed that the hill was in a state of trembling, which gradually disappeared.

Even more curious and interesting is the recorded fact that the playing of children on the slopes of Flamsteed Hill, on which the observatory of Greenwhich stands, sets the hill into vibration to such an extent as to interrupt observations which depend upon the motionlessness of a tray of mercury.

Hundreds of children are accustomed in the evening to romp upon the hill outside the observatory walls. Joining hands they run headlong down the slope, and tumble in a heap at its foot. The result is that the solid hill is thrown into such a state of tremor that the vibrations continue to be felt at the observatory until long past midnight, and for many hours after the tired children have been asleep.

Undoubtedly the nature and position of the rocks and soil composing a hill have a most important influence in determining its sensitiveness to such minute disturbances. But the fact that a hill is capable of behaving in that manner at all is calculated to make us regard the crust of the earth on which we dwell with renewed interest and curiosity.—Youth's Companion.

Swamps

Are not the only abode of malaria. You find it everywhere, even in localities where atmospheric and sanitary conditions would seem to be unfavorable to its development. The universal remedy for and preventive of the dire complaint is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Wherever the malady assumes its most virulent form, and whether it be chills and fever, bilious remittent, dumb ague or ague cake, the Bitters is most popular and constitutes the best means of protection and cure. From Maine to the Isthmus of Panama, in Guatemala, Mexico, South America and the tropics, this truly famous medicine has won "golden opinions" from all conditions and classes in more than a metaphorical sense. For debility, indigestion, constipation, rheumatism, insomnia, neuralgia, liver and kidney trouble, it is highly efficacious. Use it with persistence.

A New Paving Material.

Experiments in the material and methods of street paving have been and continue to be so numerous that, failing a fortune-teller to consult, it would seem inevitable that the right combination must be hit upon at last. What is called adamant stone is a recent invention in England, and is said to possess superior merit in respect of density and resistance to pressure. It is also frost-proof, a quality even more important in this country than in England. Whether it is capable of long service remains to be ascertained. It is composed of finely crushed Aberdeen granite and Portland cement, two parts of the former to one of the latter, mixed with water and molded under powerful hydraulic pressure.

How to Strengthen the Throat.

Sir Morell Mackenzie, who was a specialist in throat troubles, always insisted that a great many of the ailments that were brought under his notice could have been escaped but for injudicious coddling of the throat. The throat must not be wrapped up too much; the great thing is to try to harden it. By care and persistence the neck can be made as weather-proof as the face. Many people who are not in the secret are amazed that the patriarchal Gladstone can stand for hours with head uncovered in the open air while a strong breeze is blowing. The ability to do this with impunity was gained by sitting habitually at a window through which a draught was created, so that the head became accustomed to all variations of temperature and all degrees of air motion. In the same way the throat can become habituated to varying conditions. It should be kept free from wrappings. Women should dispense with their great feather boas and Medici collars and men should cast aside their stifling mufflers. It is an excellent practice to wear turn-down collars, and gargling with cold salt and water in the morning has sovereign virtue, as well as bathing the throat first with very hot water and then with very cold. The throat thus gets the effect of a sudden shock and is braced up and permanently strengthened.

Butterflies that Love Ice.

Near the top of Mount Washington, in New Hampshire, lives a little colony of very cold-loving and mountainous butterflies, which never descend below 2,000 feet from the wind-swept summit. Except just there, there are no more of their sort anywhere about, and as far as the butterflies themselves are aware, no others of their species exist on earth. They never have seen a single one of their kind save of their own colony. The scientific theory is that this little colony of chilly insects was stranded on Mount Washington at the end of the glacial period, some odd thousands of years ago, and the butterflies have dwelt there ever since, generation following generation.

A Strong Indorsement.

We have often called the attention of the readers of this paper to the fact that REID'S GERMAN COUGH AND KIDNEY CURE contains no poison. When it is considered that the rest of the popular cough remedies contain opiates or poison in some form, this claim on behalf of REID'S is an important one. We desire, therefore, to present in substantiation of this claim the following letter from Heber Chase, a well-known citizen of Wady Petra, Stark Co., Ill., and a worthy man: WADY PETRA, Ill., April 6th, 1892.—Sylvan Remedy Co.: Gentlemen—We have sold Reid's German Cough and Kidney Cure about two years, and found it to be a good seller, giving good satisfaction, and I know that it contains no poison, for my little girl, about two years old, got hold of a twenty-five cent bottle and drank it at a dose, and it did not injure her in the least. It did her good. I cheerfully recommend it to the public. Truly yours, HEBER CHASE.
