

IN GLASS,
That's the way Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pills come. And it's a more important point than you think. It keeps them always fresh and reliable, unlike the ordinary pills in cheap wooden or paper-bound boxes.

They're put up in a better way, and they're in a better way, than the huge, old-fashioned pills. No grating, no violence, no reaction afterward that sometimes leaves you worse off than before. In that way, they cure permanently. Sick Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the liver, stomach, and bowels are prevented, relieved, and cured.

They're tiny, sugar-coated granules, a compound of refined and concentrated vegetable extracts—the smallest in size, the easiest to take, and the cheapest pill you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for the good.

There's nothing likely to be "just as good."

BILL HEALEY'S BUFFALOS.

He Paralyzed the Bostonians and Made a Lot of Money.

"Old Bill Healey, he lived over in China."

What started the conversation was a buffalo coat—an old one in a Lewis-ton hotel, with the hair worn down to the hide.

"Time was when times was cheap," said the bystanders. "Now, they're as expensive as the best."

"Old Bill Healey," said the other man, trying to edge into the conversation.

"A buffalo robe in them days," said the other man, "could be bought for $4 and upwards or downwards for that matter. They was plenty. They was—"

"Old Bill Healey, he lived over in China."

It was no use stopping him now, and he was given the pole from start to finish.

"Old Bill was a drover and he was a rich man for them parts in them days. I suppose he was worth $150,000, and he always carried a good slice of it in his trousers pocket."

"Well, speaking of buffalo robes reminds me of a good story. Bill Healey went to Brighton once with a load of cattle—fat cattle and good as you ever see. Old Bill sold 'em and went into Boston and wandered down on the wharves and by the depots to see what he could find. Well, he struck there just as they was about to bid off a cargo of buffalo robes. They were in bales and there was a pile of 'em, a big pile of 'em. Old Bill was a sly-looking old fellow. Didn't he see they was hid a dollar, and as he slipped into the party of buyers he noticed a very elegant lot of gentlemen with tall hats and canes and white coats."

"The terms of the sale were this: The bidder could take one bale or ten bales or the whole cargo. Well, Bill began to bid. He was in it kind of quietly and when he bid them Boston fellows just turned their eye glasses on him, and looked him over. 'A common person,' said they. 'He can't be buying many of them.' So when old Bill bid a little over 'em they quietly withdrew, thinking he wouldn't take many and that they could gobble the lot. In this way, you see, the lot fell to Bill.

"How many bales?" said the auctioneer.

"The hull lot," said Bill.

"What!" shrieked they.

"Do you know sir, that the terms of this sale are cash and that it means a good many thousand dollars?" said the auctioneer.

"You count out your durned bales and I'll count you out the cash," and old Bill pulled out a roll as big as your hat and them Boston men were paralyzed.

"Well, sir, them buffalo robes came to China, Me., and Waterville, and were sold for $5 a pair. Farmers came from hundreds of miles to buy them. Old Bill made a stack of money on them and to-day in Waterville or China or other Kennebec towns, you can see buffalo robes whose history, you will be told, traces back to the lot that Bill Healey brought to China. Maine is full of 'em." — Lewiston Journal.

Height of Waves.

That ocean waves run "mountain high" no one ever believed unless he was very credulous indeed. The phrase is a highly exaggerated figure of speech. But the observations of keepers of lighthouses in exposed situations have proved that waves run high enough, in great storms, to make any rocky hills, some times, to top the steamer which carries supplies to the lighthouse on Tillamook Rock, on the coast of Oregon, was able to make a landing and establish communication with the light-keepers for the first time in six weeks. It brought away the chief light-keeper, who had a thrilling story to tell.

The waves of the Pacific tore away the wharves and other constructions on the rock, even carrying off timbers which had been erected to the rock. As yet however, the lantern had remained untouched.

But the storm increased, the waves rose in height, and presently dashed against the lantern, which is 150 feet above the level of the sea. Finally the water washed clear over the top of the lighthouse, coming in at the ventilators overhead.

The keepers were compelled to work desperately all night long to keep the lamp lighted. They were continually in fear that the force of glass looking seaward would be broken in by the force of the waves, and that they should themselves be washed out into the sea, to certain death. But the iron lattice-work outside the windows saved the glass panes from destruction.

The light-keepers, who were old sailors, affirmed that no experience on the planet could be so horrible as this long struggle with the storm at the summit of the lighthouse. They would have been glad to take refuge ever in a frail ship.

The Tillamook Light has on previous occasions been washed completely over by waves. The same thing has happened to the Eddystone Light, off the coast of England, and to the Light at Fleux-de-Brechet, off the coast of France, both of which are upwards of 150 feet in height.

It seems well established, therefore that waves may mount to a height of 150 feet above the general level, where there are rocks or other obstructions to break on. On the ocean they would hardly rise so high above general level but as each wave is accompanied by depression of corresponding depth, the vessel which is carried from the way may truly be said to climb a great hill of water.

To Olden Times

People overlook the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action, but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not be deceived by cheap imitations for a time, but finally injure the system.

A St. Paul Man's Story.

A railroad man who lives in St. Paul is talking about the tough elements of cities. He said it was not often that the newspapers had anything to print about St. Paul's toughs. This was not because the newspapers were not enterprising, but because there was not much in the criminal line to report in the city.

"The police have an understanding," he said, "with the criminal classes which prevents very much crime in the city. The Chief of Police has given out that whenever a sport or tough arrives in St. Paul he must report himself at once to the department. If he fails to do so, he is given time to leave, and runs great risk if he ever returns. If he reports on arrival he is never molested, unless there is a requisition out for him, or is apprehended in the commission of some crime. I have known of the presence in St. Paul of many prominent thieves, if I may use such a word as prominent in connection with that class, who remained there resting and enjoying themselves, feeling safe, knowing they were not wanted immediately elsewhere, and I have been told by the authorities that the profession was absolutely untroubled when in the city. It is the rarest thing in the world to hear of a burglary or a housebreaking in St. Paul. When it is done, it is by a novice."

A Canal Reopened.

Health is largely dependent upon a regular habit of body. The bowels act as an important canal for the carrying of waste matter of the system. They, together with the kidneys and pores, are outlets for debris whose presence is fatal to the body's well-being. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is no violent purgative, but a gentle laxative admirably adapted to the wants of the constipated. It never gripes and wrenches the intestines as all drastic cathartics do, but produces an action akin to that of a food of nature. Biliousness, indigestion, with their associate manifestations, costiveness, are speedily and completely remedied by this fine corrective, which also conquers malaria, sick headache, kidney and rheumatic trouble, and checks premature decay.

Lost Ships.

It has to many persons been an interesting speculation as to the aspect of the countless wrecks which have been swallowed up by the North Atlantic under the charge of waters has been ploughed by the keels of ships. The number probably is being reckoned by tens of thousands, and the greater part of them lie in a comparatively small part of that field. If we count this portion of the Atlantic as well as the propylactic wrecks as having an area of three million square miles, and estimate the total ruins within this space as thirty thousand, we should have an average of one sunken ship for each hundred square miles of surface. If all these craft were at once sailing over the surface of the sea we should from the deck of any one of them be likely to note the masts of several others. But as they lie on the floor of the ocean the greater part of them are reduced to low mounds of rubbish, so that if the ocean floor were converted into dry ground and we crossed it in a railway, seeing the fields as we do the prairies, it would be difficult to see any one to disclose the existence of many of these remains.

Catarrh of the Bladder is a disease which is not cured by any other method than the one we offer. It is a disease which is not cured by any other method than the one we offer. It is a disease which is not cured by any other method than the one we offer.

The Fault-Finder.

Fault-finding is itself is not criticism. Unless a man sees the merits as well as the defects in any person or thing which he would estimate, he is unable to judge wisely concerning it; and a critic is judged by his ability to perceive defects than to perceive merits. The lowest order of human intellect is fully sufficient for fault-finding. One of the surest signs of intellectual superiority is shown in a recognition of special faults in the faults which are prominent. A habit of fault-finding marks the inferiority of the fault-finder. — Sunday-School Times.

To Correct Round Shoulders.

By raising one's self insensibly upon the toes in a perpendicular position several times a day this deformity could be easily rectified. To do this properly one must be in a perfectly upright position, the arms dropping at the side. The heels well together and the toes forming an angle of forty-five degrees. The rise should be made very slowly and from the balls of both feet, and the descent should be accomplished in the same way, without swaying the body side of its perpendicular line. It can be modified, too, by standing first on one leg, then on the other, inflating and raising the chest at the same time is a part of the exercise, and if persevered in will ultimately show an increased chest-measurement, development of lung power, and a perfectly straight and erect figure.—Boston Transcript.

Saccharine.

Saccharine is the new product that is 223 times sweeter than sugar. It is a product of common coal. Besides this, there are some fifteen other substances all obtained from this commodity, all useful in the arts or the sciences, running from ammonia and common pitch to naphthaline. Most of our colors are derived from this source. In fact, the product is being analyzed from day to day, and every week almost something new is discovered or some new use found for an old one.
