

The Story of a Young Barrister, Written for This Paper.

BY SYDNEY GRUNDY.

CHAPTER I.

In becoming a member of the bar, Victor D'Aubry's only idea was to continue the dignity of the family.

seemed overcome by some terrible emotion.

"Ah, there he is! There is the wretch who tortured me, disarmed me, ruined my life, and for all I know has killed my daughter."

"Silence, you villain!" shouted Victor D'Aubry, springing upon Gouillard, as if to strangle him with his hands.

The ex-convict staggered back a step or two at these words.

"Your father?" he whispered hoarsely, passing his hand in front of his face.

"Oh, indeed," remarked Moreau, "this is an unfortunate witness. And the Count de Chauvannes is to be alive also?"

"Yes," said Victor, "and what is more, I am going to marry Marcelline de Chauvannes shortly."

Moreau gave a start, and fixed his gaze intently upon the young barrister. A deep silence ensued.

"Monsieur D'Aubry," began the aged lawyer in a voice broken with emotion, "I have a word to say to you."

"Oh, indeed," remarked Moreau, "this is an unfortunate witness. And the Count de Chauvannes is to be alive also?"

"Yes," said Victor, "and what is more, I am going to marry Marcelline de Chauvannes shortly."

Moreau gave a start, and fixed his gaze intently upon the young barrister. A deep silence ensued.

"Monsieur D'Aubry," began the aged lawyer in a voice broken with emotion, "I have a word to say to you."

"Oh, indeed," remarked Moreau, "this is an unfortunate witness. And the Count de Chauvannes is to be alive also?"

"Yes," said Victor, "and what is more, I am going to marry Marcelline de Chauvannes shortly."

Moreau gave a start, and fixed his gaze intently upon the young barrister. A deep silence ensued.

"Monsieur D'Aubry," began the aged lawyer in a voice broken with emotion, "I have a word to say to you."

"Oh, indeed," remarked Moreau, "this is an unfortunate witness. And the Count de Chauvannes is to be alive also?"

"Yes," said Victor, "and what is more, I am going to marry Marcelline de Chauvannes shortly."

Moreau gave a start, and fixed his gaze intently upon the young barrister. A deep silence ensued.

"Monsieur D'Aubry," began the aged lawyer in a voice broken with emotion, "I have a word to say to you."

"Oh, indeed," remarked Moreau, "this is an unfortunate witness. And the Count de Chauvannes is to be alive also?"

"Yes," said Victor, "and what is more, I am going to marry Marcelline de Chauvannes shortly."

Moreau gave a start, and fixed his gaze intently upon the young barrister. A deep silence ensued.

"Monsieur D'Aubry," began the aged lawyer in a voice broken with emotion, "I have a word to say to you."

"Oh, indeed," remarked Moreau, "this is an unfortunate witness. And the Count de Chauvannes is to be alive also?"

"Yes," said Victor, "and what is more, I am going to marry Marcelline de Chauvannes shortly."

Moreau gave a start, and fixed his gaze intently upon the young barrister. A deep silence ensued.

"Monsieur D'Aubry," began the aged lawyer in a voice broken with emotion, "I have a word to say to you."

"Oh, indeed," remarked Moreau, "this is an unfortunate witness. And the Count de Chauvannes is to be alive also?"

"Yes," said Victor, "and what is more, I am going to marry Marcelline de Chauvannes shortly."

Moreau gave a start, and fixed his gaze intently upon the young barrister. A deep silence ensued.

"Monsieur D'Aubry," began the aged lawyer in a voice broken with emotion, "I have a word to say to you."

"Oh, indeed," remarked Moreau, "this is an unfortunate witness. And the Count de Chauvannes is to be alive also?"

"Yes," said Victor, "and what is more, I am going to marry Marcelline de Chauvannes shortly."

Moreau gave a start, and fixed his gaze intently upon the young barrister. A deep silence ensued.

"Monsieur D'Aubry," began the aged lawyer in a voice broken with emotion, "I have a word to say to you."

"Oh, indeed," remarked Moreau, "this is an unfortunate witness. And the Count de Chauvannes is to be alive also?"

"Yes," said Victor, "and what is more, I am going to marry Marcelline de Chauvannes shortly."

his father was an honored member, with having been willful as well as blind, yet he was only too conscious of his inexperience to proceed without a sage counselor at his side.

Moreau had lately returned from Algiers whither he had been transported for a political offense. He was now an old man broken in health.

"Oh, indeed," remarked Moreau, "this is an unfortunate witness. And the Count de Chauvannes is to be alive also?"

"Yes," said Victor, "and what is more, I am going to marry Marcelline de Chauvannes shortly."

Moreau gave a start, and fixed his gaze intently upon the young barrister. A deep silence ensued.

"Monsieur D'Aubry," began the aged lawyer in a voice broken with emotion, "I have a word to say to you."

"Oh, indeed," remarked Moreau, "this is an unfortunate witness. And the Count de Chauvannes is to be alive also?"

"Yes," said Victor, "and what is more, I am going to marry Marcelline de Chauvannes shortly."

Moreau gave a start, and fixed his gaze intently upon the young barrister. A deep silence ensued.

"Monsieur D'Aubry," began the aged lawyer in a voice broken with emotion, "I have a word to say to you."

TO HANDLE CROWDS. WORLD'S FAIR ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETED.

Completed System of Interlocking Switches for Handling Railroad Cars at the Terminal Station—Both Steam and Hydraulic Power Used to Throw the Tracks.

Huge Mass of Tracks. Chicago correspondence: Arrangements for handling the daily crowds of visitors to the World's Fair after May 1 are completed.

Visitors will enter the grounds through either of the four arteries of communication—the gates, the water piers, the alley elevated and the grand railroad terminal.

IN THE WAITING-ROOM, TERMINAL STATION.

Roads entering Chicago it is probable that all will run more or less excursion trains direct to the Fair before the end of the season.

Michigan and Missouri have been given positions of honor on the American side of mines building.

switching facilities, was agreed upon. This terminal is near the main foot entrances to the grounds.

There are nine systems of two standing tracks and one switch track each. There are also four systems of two tracks each without the switch track.

be a huge globe of copper. This globe, twelve feet in diameter, will have an outline map of the world etched on it.

building is now being set up. It was shipped in pieces from St. Louis.

At West Lynn, Mass., the other day, a locomotive was coupled to a large electric motor, and power was applied to them in opposite directions.

LEGISLATIVE DOINGS. WORK OF THE STATE SOLONS AT THE CAPITAL.

Record of One Week's Business—Measures Presented, Considered, and Passed—What Our Public Servants Are Doing—In and Around Legislative Halls.

Wednesday, the bill of the Chicago Election Commission was defeated by the Australian ballot law by providing that counties shall be affixed to ballots.

one or another side of the grand central court, or passes into the depot building and enters the grounds in that way.

After a stormy session, precipitated by the efforts of a number of members to get away before adjournment, the House adjourned at 12:30 Friday.

Monday afternoon after the clerk had interrupted the reading of the journal, Mr. Barry moved to call for the roll of the assembly.

In the Senate Tuesday Farmer's bill, amending the Australian ballot law so that booths shall be provided for every twenty-five voters instead of every 100 voters.

Monday afternoon after the clerk had interrupted the reading of the journal, Mr. Barry moved to call for the roll of the assembly.

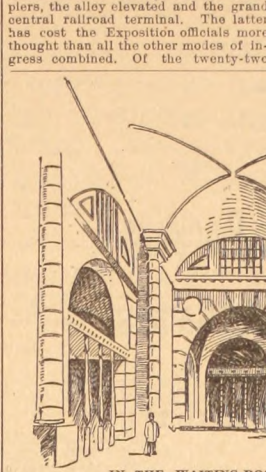

Monday afternoon after the clerk had interrupted the reading of the journal, Mr. Barry moved to call for the roll of the assembly.

Monday afternoon after the clerk had interrupted the reading of the journal, Mr. Barry moved to call for the roll of the assembly.

Monday afternoon after the clerk had interrupted the reading of the journal, Mr. Barry moved to call for the roll of the assembly.

"SILENCE! YOU VILLAINS!"

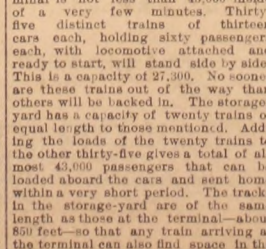

ESQUIMAUX SNOW HOUSE.

GLIMPSE OF TOWERS IN THE NORTH END OF THE GROUNDS.

THE SWITCH HOUSE.

A Tug of War.

as if trying to brush away the film that twenty years of prison gloom had laid upon his eyes.

CHAPTER II. Madame D'Aubry was alarmed at the condition of her son when he entered the apartment the next morning.

"Why, my son," replied Madame D'Aubry, "what turned your thoughts in that channel? Let me see, it was in December—yes, Dec. 10, 1847."

"Yes," but nothing," pursued Victor, "had he not been ailing long before that, had you not noticed any change in his manner, was there not a gradual falling of his mental powers?"

"Yes," but nothing," pursued Victor, "had he not been ailing long before that, had you not noticed any change in his manner, was there not a gradual falling of his mental powers?"

"Yes," but nothing," pursued Victor, "had he not been ailing long before that, had you not noticed any change in his manner, was there not a gradual falling of his mental powers?"

"Yes," but nothing," pursued Victor, "had he not been ailing long before that, had you not noticed any change in his manner, was there not a gradual falling of his mental powers?"

"Yes," but nothing," pursued Victor, "had he not been ailing long before that, had you not noticed any change in his manner, was there not a gradual falling of his mental powers?"

"Yes," but nothing," pursued Victor, "had he not been ailing long before that, had you not noticed any change in his manner, was there not a gradual falling of his mental powers?"

"Yes," but nothing," pursued Victor, "had he not been ailing long before that, had you not noticed any change in his manner, was there not a gradual falling of his mental powers?"

"Yes," but nothing," pursued Victor, "had he not been ailing long before that, had you not noticed any change in his manner, was there not a gradual falling of his mental powers?"

"Yes," but nothing," pursued Victor, "had he not been ailing long before that, had you not noticed any change in his manner, was there not a gradual falling of his mental powers?"

"Yes," but nothing," pursued Victor, "had he not been ailing long before that, had you not noticed any change in his manner, was there not a gradual falling of his mental powers?"