Northwestern Telegraphers the Victims of a Plot to Kill a Heavily Chinese-Mexican Counterfeiter Captured—Recently Cashier Abducted with the Cash.

From Far and Near. William Sullivan, the farm hand who brutally murdered his employer, Layton Leitch, and murderously assaulted the Leitch's wife, near Durand, Mich., last Jan. 25, was taken from jail at Corunna, at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday evening and lynched.

Sullivan was captured in Detroit Sunday and brought to Corunna under guard and placed in jail. When arraigned on the charge of murder Sullivan acknowledged that he had committed the crime. A crowd of men from Durand, Holly, and other surrounding towns began to assemble until 8 o'clock in the evening. More than 2,000 infuriated citizens were congregated around the jail with the intention of lynching Sullivan.

They secured the prisoner and strung him up, afterward shooting his body full of holes. Misled by a bogus order, all the telegraph operators employed by the Chicago and Northwestern Road struck at 4 o'clock Tuesday morning. The strike was soon adjusted by Chief Ramsay, of the Order of Railway Telegraphers, who notified the men that the strike was not authorized by the organization and instructed them to go back to work, and the operators obeyed.

Chief Ramsay says there is no immediate prospect of a strike. A committee of operators was sent to notify the officers of the railroad company that the order had not called on the men. They believed the order was sent at the instigation of an enemy of the Order.
