

A Fact Worth Remembering.
There are many such, of course, but here is one which is especially commended to invalids, viz., that in order to acquire vigor, the basis of health, that invigorating is only possible by re-establishing the functions of digestion and assimilation upon a permanent basis. Stomachics in name are numerous. They impart a slight stimulus to appetite—nothing beyond this. Much more is required, and Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is only possible by re-establishing the functions of digestion and assimilation upon a permanent basis. Stomachics in name are numerous. ### BACK TO HER THRONE

QUEEN LILUOKALANI TO BE RESTORED.

An Examination of the Case Has Convinced Secretary Gresham that a Wrong Was Committed the Queen of the Sandwich Islands.

Says Twiss a Conspiracy.
Queen Liliuokalani will be restored to her throne in Hawaii, if she has not been restored ere this. Friday afternoon President Cleveland's Cabinet held an unusually long session, and as a result of the discussion it was decided to give to the press the recommendations made by Secretary Gresham in the Hawaiian matter to the President. Minister Willis arrived in Honolulu on Monday last, it is supposed, and as he had in his pocket instructions in conformity with the recommendations of Secretary Gresham, which have been approved by the President, it is probable, says a Washington correspondent, that by this time the provisional government has been deposed and the Queen has reasserted authority over the islands.

At first other members of the Cabinet opposed this method of settlement. They declared the restoration of the Queen would be unpopular, and that it would be an unfortunate thing for the administration if it adopted this policy. But gradually the Secretary's presentations of the question won over not only the other members of the Cabinet but the President himself. The Secretary's letter is based upon what he describes as "the full and impartial report" submitted by Mr. Blount, Cleveland's special commissioner to the Hawaiian Islands. Secretary Gresham declares that the following facts are established:

Queen Liliuokalani announced her intention Saturday, Jan. 16, 1893, to proclaim a new constitution, but the opposition to her intention induced her to change her purpose. At a meeting held on the afternoon of that day, a so-called committee of public safety, consisting of thirteen men, a majority of whom, including five Americans, were aliens, was appointed to consider the situation and devise ways and means for the maintenance of the public peace and the protection of the property. This committee met the 16th or the forenoon of the 17th and resolved among other things that a provisional government be created. To exist until terms of union with the United States of America have been negotiated and agreed upon. The terms of the letter to John L. Stevens, the American minister to Honolulu, state that the lives and property of the people were in peril, and appealing to him and the United States forces to take command. On the 17th day of this letter Mr. Stevens requested Capt. Witz, commander of the United States sloop-of-war, to land troops, which were promptly landed and marched through the quiet streets of Honolulu with two guns and a band of music, to the government building and the palace.

The protest was prompt and vigorous. The governor protested against the act as an unwarranted invasion of Hawaiian soil and requested the proper authorities to be denied permission to land naval forces on the United States to land for drill or any other proper purpose. About the same time the queen's minister of foreign affairs sent a note to Mr. Stevens asking why the troops had been landed, and why the proper authorities were able and willing to afford full protection to the American Legation and all American interests in Honolulu. Only verbal replies were sent to these communications. Then the committee entered the government building, after which the queen's minister was unguarded and one of their number, a citizen of Honolulu, stated and proclaimed that the existing government was overthrown and a provisional government established in its place. The proclamation was read, but during the reading forty or fifty men, some of them indifferently armed, entered the room, and the queen's minister, some of them in the name of the United States of America, had been a garrisoned and agreed upon.

No audience was given to the queen's letter, and, if necessary, would be maintained by the military forces of the United States. Secretary Gresham concludes:
The earnest appeal to the American minister for protection, the offer of a new provisional government after it had been advanced shows the utter absurdity of the claim that the queen had been a garrisoned and agreed upon.

The government of Hawaii surrendered its authority under the terms of the agreement only as the Government of the United States upon the fact being presented to it, should recognize the independence of the islands and should be the last to assume sovereignty over them for good and bad.

Stevens is Surprised.
Augusta, Me., dispatch: John L. Stevens, late United States Minister to the Hawaiian Islands, was shown the press dispatch announcing the report of Secretary Gresham to the President on the affairs connected with the Hawaiian revolution. Mr. Stevens read it carefully and said: "The position to which Secretary Gresham has been fit to commit JOHN L. STEVENS himself is so extraordinary, so void of a real foundation of truth, so calumnious of the living and the dead, that I have no extended reply to make at this time. I prefer to let time and events and history decide as to the issue the Secretary has raised against the Provisional Government and the assertions he sees fit to cast on the deceased Captain of the Boston, the officers under his command, and myself. The way the United States Minister and the officers of the Boston discharged their responsibilities at Honolulu in January was more than honored by Secretary Bayard's instructions, approved by President Cleveland, of July 12, 1887."

Sure to Result in Bloodshed.
Indianapolis dispatch: When the news of the Cleveland Cabinet in reference to Hawaii was carried to General Harrison to-night he was inclined to doubt it, and said he did not think the President would announce a policy, except in a message to Congress, and he would not comment on or not," he said. "I do not want to comment on Mr. Cleveland's acts." General Harrison continued: "The Queen cannot resume her throne, I believe, without bloodshed, and it remains now to see whether the United States service will be used to establish her in power again. The question of annexation is one of deep interest to America, and will be handled, I have no doubt, by the newspapers and the people in a patriotic manner."

HARD TO EXPLAIN.
Results of the Election a Surprise to Washington Politicians.
Washington dispatch: The result of the election was received with surprise by all political parties here. The unexpected happened in so many instances that in no case were the predictions of Democracy, Republicans, or Populists fully verified. The chief surprise of the Democrats arises, not from the fact that they were defeated, but that the defeat was so general in all doubtful States and the Republican majority in the electoral college. Expressions from nearly all the prominent Democratic leaders at the capital several days before election showed that the Democrats were preparing for defeat in those States where the free coinage movement is strong and the disappointment over the passage of the repeal bill intense, but it was hardly expected that in the "sound money" States of New York and Massachusetts the Democratic majorities of the past would be so ruthlessly moved now and the Republican party organization availed so little. Despite this all the prominent Democratic leaders unite in ascribing the general defeat throughout the country to two causes. The dissatisfaction of the agricultural element and the financial market on the widespread apathy and disappointed office-seekers who have failed to realize the fruits of the last Democratic victory. In Iowa the defeat of Boies is important, not in that it means a Republican Governor in that State, but because of the Democratic victory. Early in the evening the President went to his country home instead of remaining at the Executive Mansion, as is usual on election nights, and the returns he received were only those of sufficient importance to be picked out to be relayed by Private Secretary Thurber as the latter received them from the telegraph wire at the White House.

Gov. Boies is Resigned.
A dispatch from Waterloo, Ia., Governor Boies' home, says: Governor Boies takes his defeat philosophically. On account of his illness he was not apprised of the result until next morning. The Governor manifested no surprise, and said he was particularly feeling of regret, though for his party he had hoped for a different result.

HARDER HARRISON'S ASSASSIN.
Eugene Joseph Prendergast, the assassin of Mayor Harrison, of Chicago, has been very quiet, except for the first few days, since his arrest, and has refused to answer any questions. Instead of being the criminal hero he expected to become he finds he is despised by all. The prisoners, his fellows, have been outspoken in their denunciations of him, and he knows their sentiments well. This general feeling of contempt for him was deepened by a derogatory article in the "Free Press," and after a few days' incarceration he lost much of the fierce look and speech of madness which he betrayed on his arrest. When the physicians appeared to make an examination of him the Monday day he was perfectly calm and refused to speak further than to answer necessary questions. He was subjected to a most elaborate physical examination. His head and body were measured, his eyesight tested, and his heart and lungs sounded. The physician at last refused to give the results until they had consulted together. And, in any case, they said, the trial was the only proper time for them to speak.

Prendergast was brought before Judge Dunne for examination. His lawyers asked for a continuance of the examination in which they might call witnesses from a distance. The case was set for Nov. 27. This proved satisfactory, and Prendergast was taken back to his cell. The defense will be insanity, and the prosecution will endeavor to prove that Prendergast is not insane.

Literary Women and Mr. Fig.
I have the honor of the persons acquainted with only those women who make literature their profession, writes Octave Thanet in reply to the question, "Why Do Not Literary Women Marry?" in the Ladies Home Journal. But I know and admire the writings of most of the American authors, and with the aid of a friend I compiled two lists which are submitted to the private inspection of the editor of the Ladies Home Journal, marked Appendix A.

The first list contains the names of authors and matron in good repute. The second list has the names of successful spinster authors. The first list has forty-four names, the second seventeen.

If one further consider that from one-third to one-half of the unmarried writers are still young enough to give good marriages, and that they are in good condition before they die, it will appear that the pessimist has grounds for cheer. These women, too, whatever their reason for not marrying, reverence the home. They are lovers of children, unless their writings belie them; they paint vividly the love of woman for man. I may say that their attitude toward love is that of respectful sympathy.

The Christmas Rose.
The chrysanthemum was imported into Europe during the latter part of the seventeenth century, and was regarded as belonging to the "exotic" family, writes Nancy Mann Waddle, in an exquisitely illustrated article entitled "The Imperial Flower of Japan," in the Ladies Home Journal. It was first grown in Holland, then imported into England under the name of the "Chrysanthemum."

Our "willow pattern" cousins are very fond of a form of decorative art, which strikes us as very stiff and extremely inartistic, that is, they make statues and forms of thickly massed chrysanthemums. But, as a people, they lead sweet lives, and generally they are very understanding that one is almost tempted to fancy that a chrysanthemum lady, or duck, or pig, might be quaintly charming.

The chrysanthemum is sometimes called the "Christmas rose," owing to the sweet old legends which tell us that the first chrysanthemum, which "On that best morn When Christ was born Into white beauty burst."

Russia-China.
It may be laid down as a safe general rule that any and every agreement made between China and Russia will be detrimental to the interests of China—by this simple reason, that Russia always knows precisely what she is driving at, while China has never yet apprehended the true purport of any convention she has made with a foreign power, and usually discovers too late that her confidence in the magic power of phrases has been misplaced.

This is especially true of the treaties and protocols he has made with Russia during the past generation; they have been so many steps in the Russian advance, and such they are likely to continue.—Blackwood's Magazine.

A Family Laxative.
Physicians are not inclined to recommend self-medication to the laity. Yet there is one need, says the American Analyst, which they are almost unable to supply. We refer to the family laxative. The family physician is able to prescribe for the most complicated and obscure of maladies, and yet is often unable to know what to give when asked for a remedy which can be kept in the house for family use as a laxative, that shall be effective, free from danger, and not unpleasant to take. When absent on our summer vacation we were asked by four different parties, representing as many families, what we thought of the "Syrup of Figs." Not one word did we venture on the subject, and we were somewhat surprised to find that there was this small lot of the very general use of that preparation. These parties said they derived more benefit from it and found it more pleasant to take than anything of the kind they had ever used. The simple question was, "What is the composition of the compound?" We informed them that its active ingredient was a preparation of senna, and that it was entirely free from danger. With this assurance they volunteered the information that they should continue to keep it in the house.

The therapeutic properties of senna are so well known that comment on its secrets unnecessary. It might be well to notice, however, that Bartholomew says it is "a very safe and serviceable cathartic," and that it is "highly prized as a remedy for constipation." He also makes the important observation that it is "not followed by intestinal torpor and constipation."

The simple truth of the matter is, we have always given the few preparations which we can recommend to our families as effective laxatives. But the California Fig Syrup Company has one of the most desirable combinations for this purpose with which we are familiar. The Fig Syrup Company gives to the profession the composition of this preparation, therefore there is no secret about it; the persons who use this laxative speak in the highest terms about it, and we are pleased to notice that a large number of physicians are prescribing it.

Viewed from the narrowest and most selfish standpoint the physician will lose nothing by recommending such a preparation as Syrup of Figs to his patients; while viewed from the highest standpoint of doing the best possible by those who place themselves in our care, we would say the profession cannot do better than give their endorsement to such a preparation.

POWER will intoxicate the best hearts, as wine the strongest heads. No man is wise enough or good enough to be trusted with an unlimited power; for, whatever qualifications he may have evinced to entitle him to the possession of so dangerous a privilege, yet when possessed, others can no longer answer for him, because he can no longer answer for himself.—Colton.
