Tobacco Caused Consumption—Notobac Cures the Tobacco Habit and Consumptive Gets Well.

TWO RIVERS, Wis., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Great excitement and interest has been manifested in the recovery of an old-time resident of this town, Mr. Jos. Bunker, who has for several years been considered by all his friends a hopeless consumptive. Investigation shows that for over thirty-two years he used three and a half pounds of tobacco a week. A short time ago he was induced to try a tobacco-habit cure called "No-To-Bac." Talking about his miraculous recovery to-day he said: "Yes, I used No-To-Bac, and two boxes completely cured me. I thought, and so did all my friends, that I had consumption. Now they say, as you say, 'how healthy and strong you look, Joe,' and whenever they ask me what cured my consumption, I tell them No-To-Bac. The last week I used tobacco I lost four pounds. The morning I began the use of No-To-Bac I weighed 127½ pounds; to-day I weigh 169, a gain of 41½ pounds. I eat heartily and sleep well. Before I used No-To-Bac I was so nervous that when I went to drink I had to hold the glass in both hands. To-day my nerves are perfectly steady. Where did I get No-To-Bac? At the drug store. It is made by the Sterling Remedy Company, general Western office 45 Randolph St., Chicago, but I see by the printed matter that it is sold by all druggists—I know all the druggists in this town keep it. I have recommended it to over one hundred people and do not know of a single failure to cure."

EMPEROR WILLIAM is determined to make his hunting lodge at Rominton, near Theerbude, as attractive and luxurious as possible. A few days ago he purchased the adjoining piece of land to add to the park about the castle. The piece contained thirty-five acres and cost the imperial purchaser about 15,000 marks. The Emperor, despite his disabilities, is a passionate hunter and prides himself on his good marksmanship.

HART FOUND GUILTY.

Rockford Jury Sentences the Red-Handed Murderer to Death.

The jury in the Hart murder trial at Rockford, after being out one hour and twenty minutes, brought in a verdict finding the defendant guilty and fixing his punishment at death. One ballot was all that was taken. Hart received the verdict coolly and made no demonstration. Public sentiment approves the verdict.

The crime for which Hart was tried was the murder of his two sisters, Mary and Nellie, on the afternoon of Sept. 5 last. His act was undoubtedly the result of trouble in the family over the division of the estate left by John Hart, the father of the defendant, who committed suicide two years ago, leaving much valuable property. The family consisted of Mrs. Hart, two daughters and six sons. John, who was the oldest boy, wanted the estate divided, while the mother and sisters would not consent to break up the homestead. Up to the time of the double murder the counsel of Mrs. Hart and her daughters prevailed, and the family lived together on the farm, which prospered under the management of the boys. The day of the tragedy John was at home alone with his mother and sisters. During the afternoon Mrs. Hart left the house for a short time. It was during her absence that Hart attacked the two girls, killing Mary instantly and fatally injuring Nellie. She died the following day, but made an ante-mortem statement fixing the crime upon her brother, John Hart.

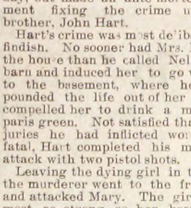
Hart's crime was most deliberate and fiendish. No sooner had Mrs. Hart left the house than he called Nellie to the barn and induced her to go with him to the basement, where he nearly pounded the life out of her and then compelled her to drink a mixture of paris green. Not satisfied that the injuries he had inflicted would prove fatal, Hart completed his murderous attack with two pistol shots.

Leaving the dying girl in the barn, the murderer went to the front yard and attacked Mary. The girl was almost as strong as her brother and made a desperate fight for her life.



THE MURDERED GIRLS.

The porch where she had been sitting was stained with blood, and the surroundings showed that a terrible struggle had taken place. The design of the murderer was successfully executed, for he left his sister dying upon the grass.

As Mrs. Hart was returning to the farmhouse she saw John gallop out of the barnyard gate on an unsaddled horse. Near the porch she was horrified to find the dead body of Mary. The alarm was given, and a search for Nellie led to the discovery of her senseless body under the barn. She was cared for and every effort made to save her life. There was no hope, however, and to Attorney R. G. McAvoy, a partner of State's Attorney Arthur H. Frost, she made her statement.

Fashion and Fauna.

The ebb and flow of fashion brings about conditions of great unrest in the animal world. The present craze for lizard skin for purses, card cases, etc., has hardly had time to effect a serious decimation in the ranks of the useful and, as a rule, harmless reptiles that are sacrificed to meet it; but the consequences of the continued destruction of the little anima's are sure to avert themselves in some way or other. In all probability they will be noticed in the direction of insect life, and there will be an abnormal increase in the number of insects destructive to crops, which insects form the staple food of the lizard. This is notably the case in the West Indies, where the mongoose has been introduced. This fierce and relentless little vandal first kills off all the lizards, and then sets to work on the birds. The result is that the land is given up to a plague of ticks, which, being no longer kept down by seeing as food for other animals increase in countless millions and literally cover the face of the earth. A counterpart of this destruction of the balance of nature is now to be seen in the South. The fashion for bags and other articles of alligator skin still lingers, and the alligators of the Southern bayous have been hunted so closely that they are almost exterminated. On the whole, although their reputation was somewhat unsavory, they did a great deal more good than harm, and performed excellent service in keeping down muskrats, rabbits, raccoons and other small animals that have increased to a late in alarming numbers and are now working great havoc upon rice, lettuce and cabbage fields.

Tariff and Taxation.

Tariff duties and internal revenue taxation on incomes and corporations are exciting public interest, but of quite as much interest are those things which tax the system and require at once an external remedy. On this subject, with special recommendation, Mr. Pierce D. Brown, Bridgewater, Mass., says: "In accidents from all kinds of athletic sports, to reduce sprains and bruises, I have used St. Jacobs Oil and always found it most reliable." Also, Mr. C. R. Sands, Margum, Okla., writes: "I have used St. Jacobs Oil for sprains and rheumatism and would not be without it for anything." Mr. R. Ledbetter, Denton, Texas, says: "I have used St. Jacobs Oil and it is the only thing I ever saw that would cure toothache in ten minutes' time," and it is usually prompt and sure for frost-bites. All of these communications are of recent date, showing unabated interest.

Blew the Paint Off the Mast.

Capt. Hurlbut of the British bark Bowman B. Law considers himself fortunate in coming out of a terrible typhoon in the China seas, not without a scratch, but without the loss of any of his crew, or even of a spar or sail. This is his experience as he related it: "We left Sourabaya, Java, the 25th of July, bound for the Columbia River. All went well for the first week. The men put in their time well about the ship, and one particular job that was attended to was painting the mizzen-topmast. This was wood, the other masts and topmasts being iron. I noticed that the paint on the spar blistered more or less under the tropical sun. The afternoon, under a clear sky, the storm came on us. There was hardly any warning. The typhoon shot out of the Gulf of Siam as though it came from a cannon. What in the distance was a ripple over the surface of the sea as it approached us became a feathery, foam-shaded mass of waves, and the next minute the hurricane struck us. All sail was stowed away, and we tore ahead under bare poles at locomotive speed. When the fury of the typhoon abated we found everything intact. The mizzen-topmast, however, was bare of paint. The wind had blown the blisters off, and nothing remained but the uncovered wood."

When Wants Declared

Against a man's happiness by his stomach, the enemy may be pacified and brought speedily and easily to terms. That potent regulator of digestion, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, disciplines the rebellious organ thoroughly. Indigestion arises from weakness of the stomach, and the food in it, for want of the power to digest, decomposes and acidifies, giving rise to heartburn, flatulence and pain, besides a multitude of symptoms both changeful and perplexing. But peace soon reigns when the great stomachic is resorted to and used with persistence. Dyspepsia gives rise to morbid discomposure of mind, and even sleeplessness and hypochondria in chronic cases. But the complete dismissal of these the Bitters is fully adequate. Liver complaint, constipation, debility, rheumatism and malaria are completely subdued by this genial medicine.

A Railroad Across Sahara.

We have only to look on the map to see what a large space upon the world's surface the Sahara covers. It takes up more square miles than the whole Mediterranean sea and is as great as the whole of Europe, leaving out Scandinavia. Over this enormous tract France proposes to build a railroad to connect her possessions in Senegambia with Algeria and Tunis. The work is at present in hand, and many marvels of engineering have been accomplished lately that this may even yet be really done. Experts say it is a work possible of achievement.

Singing for His Life.

John Abell, a celebrated singer and musician who lived in the reign of Charles II., had a very great notion of himself, and would not perform unless he pleased. There is a funny story told of how he was once made to sing against his will.

While traveling abroad for pleasure he came into the town of Warsaw. News was brought to the palace of the famous English singer's arrival, and Frederick Augustus, the King of Poland, some lately sent word that he desired Abell to appear before him.

"Tell his Majesty," replied John, curtly, "that it suits me not."

Back went the court messenger with a wry face; he knew his master's temper too well.

"Tell Master Abell," thundered the king, "that I will have him come. And take you, boy, three stout fellows with you."

The messenger and the three stout fellows between them managed to carry out the royal wish, and presently marched triumphantly up to the palace with their unwilling captive.

The king was awaiting them in the great hall, where he had seated himself in a balcony that ran all round the sides. Above him an immense chair hung from the roof by a rope.

"Now then, into the chair and up with him," cried Frederick Augustus, with a chuckle; "we'll soon see if our song-bird won't sing in his cage. Up with him, my merry men all!"

And up in the air swung Abell, who still refused to open his mouth. When he gave a glance downward, however, he changed his mind. Into the hall beneath him a number of wild bears had been turned loose.

"Sing, sirrah!" the king shouted, "or down you go to play with my brown babies."

One look at these "brown babies," growling and snarling below in a very unbaby-like manner, was sufficient to convince the stubborn John. Sing he did, and he often used to declare in after days that he never sang so well in his life as when he was hanging there, a hundred feet high above the fierce beasts.

The Squeal of the Sucker.

Nothing is more amusing in its way than the fierce desire for justice which takes possession of a man who unduly realizes that he has been victimized by green goods swindlers. He wants the law mercilessly enforced. He is anxious that the rascals shall be brought to book, and is willing to go to any extent—at government expense, of course—to put the villains behind the bars.

It would have been different, of course, if he had got the counterfeit money he bargained for instead of sawdust or blank paper. But that is another story. It is only when the poor fool realizes that he has been victimized that he suddenly becomes virtuous and honest and allows his indignation to slop over. Then he swelters in wrath and fairly wallows in rage against swindling in every form. Usually he writes to the authorities at Washington.

Men's and Women's Judgment.

"Mr. Howells holds that the fate of a book in this country is decided by women."—New York Tribune.

The judgment of thoughtful men, as well as of women, upon books about which they are competent to form an opinion, must, as a matter of fair play, be taken into account. There are some men who are not bad judges of some books, who are able to criticise them, and who possess a good amount of bookish knowledge. We feel that it is our duty to speak a good word for the men once in a while. Men have their rights, and we shall help them to beat up against their wrongs. There are write s who do not seem to think much of men, and we are willing to admit that many of them are rattle-brained creatures; yet they ought to get a show in the world. There are writers who believe that the masculine intellect is of imperfect quality, and we ourselves are of that opinion: yet the men ought to get credit for such brains as they have. We think that their votes, as well as those of women, should be taken when the fate of a book is to be decided, especially if the book is upon a subject which they may know as much as women. The fact that so many of the very best women in the country have given their decision in favor of Mr. Howells' books is great y to his honor. It is a fact that will undoubtedly influence the minds of many of the men.—New York Sun.

THE BREATH of a chronic catarrh patient is often so offensive that he becomes an object of disgust. After a time ulceration sets in, the spongy bones are attacked, and frequently destroyed. A constant source of discomfort is the dripping of the purulent secretions into the throat, sometimes producing inveterate bronchitis, which is often by the exciting cause of pulmonary disease.
