Corn-Pith Imitates Pottery.

One of the most curious of the exhibits at Chicago was a collection of imitation pottery jewel boxes and vases. The writer saw a vase, ewer or bowl, six or eight inches high, of a mellow straw color which was beautified by flowers in relief of various color and design. He picked it up for closer examination, when presto it seemed to lift itself in the air, it was so light. It looked to be pottery, but it "lifted" like goose-down, for it was made entirely of the pith of cornstalks.

The pith, ground up, forms a pulp from which the vessels are fashioned in a way something like the papier mache process. The ornamentation is then laid on by hand, the petals and stems of flowers, etc., being carefully cut out of the pith, delicately colored, and glued to the exterior. Daisies and clover, asters or forget-me-nots, lilies and roses, bloom out of the neglected corn-pith. This corn-pith ware, or "zea-pithia," as its inventor names it, is the product of a single young enthusiast in a New England town, who has a thriving trade in his curious manufacture. One of the comical features of the business is the receipt of many orders from places like St. Augustine, Niagara Falls, Saratoga, etc., where tourists congregate and where the "zea-pithia" ware is sold by the peddlers, "Indians," and storekeepers, as a local product for souvenirs of the place.—New York Tribune.

Australia's Coral Reef.

One of the marine wonders of the world is the great barrier reef of Australia. This stupendous rampart of coral, stretching in an almost unbroken line for 1,200 miles along the northeastern coast of Australia, presents features of interest which are not to be equaled in any other quarter of the globe. Inclosed within the range of its protecting arms is a calm inland sea, 80,000 square miles in extent, dotted with a multitude of coral islets and presenting an almost unbroken barrier alike to the unlearned traveler and the man of science. Here may be witnessed the singular process by which the wavy, gelatinous, living mass hardens into stone, then serves as a collecting ground for the flotsam and jetsam of the ocean, and ultimately develops into an island covered with a luxuriant mass of tropical growth. Here, again, may be seen in the serene depths of placid pools extraordinary forms of marine life, aglow with the most brilliant colors and producing in their infinite variety a bewildering sense of the vastness of the life of the ocean.

A Doleful Visitor.

Men and women who have always a tale to tell of "how he suffered that way himself," should be kept out of the patient's room. Their sympathy will do more harm than good. In the sick chamber, if the patient can see company at all, there should be only bright, cheery talk, and the creature with "symptoms" can talk a man into having any and every disease on earth in less than half an hour. A sick man should be led to forget his ills and not to rehearse them or compare notes.

ARREST THE RIOTERS

FEDERAL MARSHALS AT MOUNT OLIVE TAKE FORTY.

Seventh Regiment Fills Strikers with Fear and They Offer No Resistance to Officers —Guilty Ones Being Apprehended Wherever Found.

Cowed by the Troops.

Among the coal-mining districts which refused to abide by the Columbus agreement was Mount Olive, Ill. Strikers there interfered with the running of coal trains on a road which is in the hands of a receiver, and threatened other lawlessness. Deputy United States marshals from Chicago went down to enforce order, but were routed Saturday in a pitched battle. Governor Altgeld then ordered out the Seventh Regiment, I. N. G., and the troops reached the scene Monday morning. Then the marshals revenged themselves on the strikers. Forty arrests were made, and the troops took charge of the prisoners. It is expected that fully as many more will be apprehended. Almost without exception the miners arrested are non-English speaking Slavs, Huns, Italians and Germans. The miners were frightened when before the arrival of the boys in blue. In the morning a largely attended meeting had been held and a telegram had been sent to Governor Altgeld asking him to have the troops called home and agreeing to surrender all the prisoners that had been taken from United States Marshal Brinton and his deputies Saturday night. Those who were foremost in the assault upon the marshals were now in most abject fear of the troops. They knew enough to be aware of the fact that in interfering with a government official they had committed a grave offense. Deputy Sheriff Henry Hillier has State warrants for more than one hundred additional strikers. He has a large force of deputy sheriffs with him, and he will prosecute the search until he is satisfied that every man in Mount Olive who intimidated train crews or interfered with traffic in any way has been arrested. It is feared that many of the guilty will secretly leave the city.

After the troops arrived and pitched camp in the yard of the Zion Evangelist Church, the real work began. Marshal Brinton had United States warrants for the four men whom he and his deputies had under arrest for a short time on Saturday. He also had an order from Judge W. A. Allen, of the United States District Court, Springfield, to arrest everybody who could be identified as having aided in the rescue of the four prisoners on Saturday evening.

"If you want to make some arrests," said Colonel Colby, "I have some men ready to take care of them. This was addressed to Marshal Brinton and Deputy Sheriff Hillier. By this time the old-fashioned board fence around the churchyard bore a wall of humanity. The deputy marshals and deputy sheriffs had been carefully watching the faces of the men along the fence. Among them was an old man with a sneer on his face, and in broken German he was mocking the commands of the officers of the guard. Two deputy marshals walked out to where he was standing. One got each side of him and he was made a prisoner. He protested against his arrest, but he was hurried back to the west side of the churchyard and placed in care of the guard.

"I'll never forget that fellow," said Marshal Brinton. "For an instant last Saturday evening I was of the opinion that he was the instrument by which I was to be ushered into eternity. In the thick of the fight, when we were trying to retain our prisoners, he shoved a revolver into my face and held it there long enough for me to feel its muzzle grating against my teeth. How it happened I do not know, but one of the deputies managed to knock the gun from his murderous grasp. I am sure that this action saved my life." Rapidly the prisoners were brought in, and as familiar faces appeared the mob of women around the fence jeered at the soldiers in a frenzy. The prisoners are in jail at Springfield and Carlinville.

LIKE HARNESSING OF NIAGARA.

The Des Moines Rapids to Be Made to Work.

Progress has made one more stride, and one of the greatest schemes of the century is well started toward realization. The contract though for the proposed developments of the Des Moines Rapids water power has been signed and work will soon begin on the canal and power station which is to give to Keokuk and the surrounding country power which shall turn the wheels of industry as they never turned before in that locality.

For more than twenty-five years it has been the dream of engineers and others to harness the immense natural power of the Mississippi River as it flows over the rapids at that point. Many surveys have been made and many plans drawn, but for some reason or other the matter was dropped in every instance until two years ago, when Capt. James Anthony, an able engineer, took the project in charge. Then it began to assume practical form.

The scheme is to confine the water as it flows over the rapids in a wide canal, and use it in the operation of turbine water wheels, which in turn shall operate dynamos for the generation of electrical energy, which is to be transmitted by wires to the surrounding localities. The Illinois shore is to serve as one wall of the canal. Beginning at the mouth of Larry's creek, near the Senora stone quarries, a wall similar to that of the government canal at this point is to be built. This wall is to be 20,000 feet in length, with an average height of 17 feet, being 13 feet 4 inches high at the head and 24 feet high at the lower end, there being a natural fall in the river of 13 feet 4 inches in that distance. At the head the canal is to be 1,238 feet wide, and the width is to be gradually reduced toward the narrows, where it will be 400 feet. The wall will then parallel the shore for some distance, then the canal will gradually widen to 1,485 feet. At the head of the canal a permanent ice boom of solid masonry 1,812 feet long, 10 feet high, and with an average width of 8 feet, is to be built. It will extend 100 feet beyond the outer wall, and will be 675 feet above the end of the wall.

At the lower end the canal is to be closed with a dam 930 feet long extending out from the shore, 24 feet high, 51 feet at the base and 5 feet at the crest. Extending out from and at an angle of 45 degrees with this dam will be the foundation for the power house, which will be 200 feet long and 80 feet wide. There is to be a capacity of 20 turbine water wheels, each developing 387 horse-power, capable of operating dynamos generating by the direct current system 27,000 electrical horse-power. At each side of the power house will be three flood gates, each 20 feet wide, set between solid masonry piers 26 feet high with a 40-foot base and 10-foot crest. By opening these gates the canal may be emptied in 12 hours. The working head of water will be 11 feet, and so vast is the capacity of the canal should the flow into it be cut off the plant could be operated 30 hours with the supply on hand. It is estimated that this improvement will cost $500,000. It is intended to have the canal completed and in working order by January 1, 1896.

THIS REVOLUTION SUCCEEDED.

The Government of Salvador Overthrown by Rebels.

After a revolution of but a month's duration the government of Salvador has been overthrown and the President, Gen. Carlos Ezeta, has fled the country. The Vice President, Gen. Antonio Ezeta, brother of the President, and the principal general of the government army, was killed about three weeks ago, but his death has been kept secret until now. Had he lived, it is safe to say, the outcome of the revolution would have been different, for up to his death the government had everything its own way, and its enemies could make little progress with the rebellion. The leader of the revolutionists is Gen. Rafael Gutierez, and it is believed that he will assume the Presidency.

Gen. Ezeta, who is now a fugitive, became President in 1890, when he was successful in overthrowing the Government of Gen. Menandez, whose arbitrary methods had reduced the country to a condition of ferment and excitement. Strong efforts were made to oust Gen. Ezeta from the position he had gained, but without success, and eventually the Salvador Congress met and ratified the choice of the army.

As soon as the country was once more tranquil Gen. Ezeta and his brother, Antonio, who was made Vice President, directed their energies to promoting the advancement of Salvador in every direction, and succeeded in placing it in an enviable position. New roads were made and new parks opened, telegraphs were constructed from state to state, telephones from city to city.—In short, the whole administration was one of progress. However, the risks of one-man power are as great for the ruler as the ruled, and Gen. Ezeta has not escaped the fate which so commonly befalls autocrats.

A DARING SCHEME.

To Link Hudson Bay and the Gulf of Mexico.

Representative McCleary, of Minnesota, who is a member of the committee on rivers and canals, has laid the foundation of a scheme to connect the Gulf of Mexico with Hudson Bay. Mr. McCleary proposes that the United States and Canadian governments carry out the project together. His plan is to have the survey made by way of the Minnesota river, whose headwaters and those of the Red River of the North nearly join through Big Stone and Traverse lakes. In high water boats of considerable size have crossed from one lake to the other and it would not require a very large canal to connect the waters of the Red and Minnesota rivers.

While the difficulty of connecting the Red and Minnesota Rivers is not great, it is claimed that the rapids in the Winnipeg River have always discouraged the Canadian government from the undertaking. There have been several conventions of citizens of northern Minnesota, North Dakota and Winnipeg looking to the opening of the Winnipeg River, in the hope that they might find a short water outlet to the seaboard. Each of these conventions has been confronted with the obstruction in the Winnipeg River, but Mr. McCleary thinks that if the United States should take some steps toward opening up a channel on this side of the boundary the Canadian government might be inclined to take some action looking to opening the Winnipeg River.

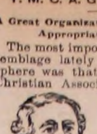
Y. M. C. A. GOLDEN JUBILEE.

A Great Organization's Fiftieth Birthday Appropriately Celebrated.



GEORGE WILLIAMS

The most important international assemblage lately held in either hemisphere was that of the Young Men's Christian Association, which has just closed in London. This coming together celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the parliamentary organization and the golden jubilee was ushered in not only with appropriate ceremonies but by the deliberation of a representative body composed of delegates from the whole world. The United States sent one of the strongest delegations, as a matter of course, but England also was impressively represented, while all the countries of Europe, excepting Turkey, had eminent men to speak for them. Over 1,600 delegates besides nearly 4,000 visitors, participated.

The event had been anticipated in a series of advance preparations for the past two years. The preliminary call had been issued since last year by the International Committee now located at Geneva, Switzerland. It is three years since the first steps were taken at Amsterdam, Holland, for the celebration by the appointment of Gustave Tophel, Chairman; Edward Barde, Vice Chairman; Jean Billon, Secretary; Frederick Binna, Treasurer, and twenty-two other gentlemen, representing every civilized nation. Great as was the representation of the United States, it was but typical of every land. The American delegation of over one hundred, headed by John Wanamaker, Rev. Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler, General Secretary Richard S. Moss of the National Committee, Secretary R. R. McBurney of New York, Rev. George A. Hall, New York's State Secretary; Luther D. Wishard, Secretary National Committee; G. W. Bierce and E. L. Shuey, representing Ohio; Geo. Taylor from California, Rev. Dr. A. H. Scott of Perth, Ont., and others as eminent in the work, went to bespeak this country's aims in the conference.

The place of meeting was Exeter Hall, one of London's most imposing public edifices. The assemblage was in session for over a week, and its deliberations included measures for the beginning of a crusade that is designed to spread the movement in every country. And not least among its historical features was the presence, as an honored delegate, of the man who founded, fifty years ago, the first Young Men's Christian Association, George Williams. He is now the wealthy head of the house in which he clerked at the time when he began his organizing propaganda in a little room in London with a few of his fellow clerks.

On the opening day of the conference, the Committee on Credentials went into session and the certificates in all languages were duly approved. The following evening at 7 o'clock there was a reception of delegates at Exeter Hall proper, which was decorated with the emblems of all nationalities for the occasion. The official welcome came from 8 to 9 o'clock in the evening, when the venerable George Williams received the tributes and courtesies of all the visitors.

THE "MODEL TOWN."

Deplorable Condition of Affairs at Pullman, Ill.

The condition of affairs in Pullman, Ill., is calling for investigation in all directions. Four thousand men are idle there, having struck against a reduction of wages to the starvation point. The entire town of Pullman is private property. The Pullman Company owns not only the lots and houses, but the streets and alleys, school-house sites and parks. Not a dollar's worth of what, in other towns, is public property was ever passed out of the ownership of Mr. Pullman's corporation. Not an acre in Pullman has been deeded to the public use. The "model town" is not a town. It has no town organization nor officers. It is managed by the private corporation, and it is taxed as a farm of manufacturing plant is taxed. It is a peculiar institution in this respect. The officers of the private corporation can fence up the streets and alleys and evict the school from the school buildings if they shall so determine.

W. C. Owens, who is waging such a desperate fight against Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge in old Kentucky, and may defeat him for Congressman, is a native of Scott County, Ky., where he has always lived. He is 44 years old, unmarried, and a graduate of Columbia College Law School, New York City. In 1876 he was elected to the Kentucky Legislature, where he remained five terms. He was a delegate at large to the Democratic National Convention in 1892. He has for several years been looked upon as Breckinridge's successor.

"GOOD OLD BUCKSTONE."

He Was the Life and Chief Interest of Every Performance.

Buckstone—the "good old Buckstone," the delight of our boyhood—made a visit to the bright Haymarket something akin to enchantment, says the Gentleman's Magazine. Oh, for those days of pure, unalloyed theatrical pleasure! You went to see not the play, but Buckstone hui-memee. He would figure in some unextending but satisfactory character in the important piece of the night, and where he aided the others. But it was not until toward 10 o'clock that people poured in—it was the day of "second price"—to see their "Bucky" virtually by himself in some deliciously absurd—not situation nor farce. His voice, heard first behind the scene, sent an anticipatory chuckle through the theater, to swell into a roar when he appeared. It was full of an unctuous enjoyment.

When he came on his figure was unconsciously grotesque—not dressed up to look absurd but naturally so like some of those "Quizzes" we meet occasionally in society, who are unconscious that their friends are so amused at them. This same tone of easy, natural, unforced drollery attended him to the very last sentence of the piece. He was irresistible—as when he would tell us quietly that "he had merely gone to Buxton to drink the waters."

The whole drama was "Bucky" himself. Oh, for that exquisite comic face, that mouth twisted to one side, the words issuing from one of its corners, the eyes twinkling with uncontrollery and fun! Then followed a series of absurd embarrassments, with roars to the end, when everyone went home to supper or bed in good humor and enjoyment. This "seeing Buckstone" was entertainment enough, and it is curious now to look back and think how the enjoyment depended on the exertions of a single personage, who spread light and animation all about him. Buckstone, in fact, was the Haymarket. Now, as night draws on, we require solid, substantial pieces of "pudding," to be partaken of slowly and deliberately, and go home interested, indeed, but rather thoughtful and serious.

Those Little Sieves,

The kidneys, separate from the blood, as it passes through them, impurities for which the final medium of liberation from the system is the bladder. When their function is suspended direful results ensue. Among these are dropsy. Bright's disease, diabetes and maladies which terminate in some one of these. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters stimulates the kidneys, not as an unmedicated alcoholic stimulant would by inciting them, but by gently impelling them to renewed action and perpetuating their activity and vigor. Thus the blood is once more insured purification and the organs themselves saved from destruction. Malaria, constipation, liver complaint, nervousness, dyspepsia and rheumatism are thoroughly remedied by the Bitters, which is, moreover, a most thorough appetizer, general tonic and sleep promoter. Use it regularly, not semi-occasionally.
