Struck Near the Crossing.

An accident by which a man by the name of Demencio DeVincenzo lost his arm occurred Saturday evening.

He was on the 8 p. m. passenger and jumped off near the north crossing. He did not notice that a freight was swiftly backing down on the next track. The caboose struck him and he fell on the track, the caboose wheels crushing his right arm. He was taken to the town house and the Company physician attended him. It was necessary to take off the arm nearly to the shoulder. He was taken care of at the Pennsylvania House, and will recover fully from the unfortunate accident.

The entertainment at the Congregational church Saturday night, was satisfactory to the audience, as the renditions by this company of singers all ways has been. The southern voices were mellow and the various selections were rendered with great expression. The evening was very favorable and a good crowd attended. We understand that the engagement was successful and that everyone was pleased over the results.

The caboose of the way freight was smashed to pieces, several box cars were smashed and several flat cars thrown off. The way freight jumped the track at the third car from the engine and it was a short flight.

A special car due north and carrying Superintendent Gray, happened along with this time.

Jennie O'Neill Potter Dead.

The obituary of the above lady, or as she was better known here, as Emily Livingston, has been handed into this office. She will be remembered as having been in Dwight about two years ago and having given readings at the club and was the center of one of the finest literary and musical entertainments ever given in the opera house. She was an elocutionist of national reputation which brought her fame and money.

She was stricken with cancer last December and was in St. Luke's Hospital, New York, until death ensued. Services were held under the direction of Ella Wheeler Wilcox, and the remains were taken to Patch Grove, Wis., where the girl was born, and laid to rest.

Thefts.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Fenn was entered about 3 a. m. Friday morning. Mrs. Fenn awoke and lighting a lamp started for a drink of water about the time he entered, for only one man was seen and he wore large rubber boots and brought considerable mud into the house with him. The Fenn home was entered several weeks ago, and that time a pocketbook containing some change was taken.

The home of Carl Miller was also entered Friday morning, but nothing taken. These thefts attempted and accomplished are becoming frequent and more bold, and it is hoped that the guilty parties can be found and punished. Several of our citizens houses were entered and from many parts of town attempted thefts are reported, and the rain Friday morning caused them to track mud through every house they entered.

The special train bearing Admiral Dewey, wife and party, pulled into Dwight about 11 o'clock Thursday morning. Everyone who could get there was at the station to see Dewey, and hear the brief remarks he made, and to get his cordial goodbye as the train pulled out.

The town was granted a few minutes with the Admiral although for a while it looked as though the special might not stop here, it being late out of Joliet. The Admiral stood in the vestibule of the last coach and, the citizens watched him as the special gradually went from their sight.
