The republican candidates for county offices will be seen in all parts of the county from this time on. They are popular and will win by increased majorities.

Quite a number from here attended the big republican rally at Long Point Saturday, and report a big time and that the republican sentiment is stronger than ever.

Holly, the democratic candidate for congress, came home from LaSalle county the other day and said he thought he would carry that county. Even the democrats smiled at poor Holly, because they know that no man could come within four or five thousand votes of beating Congressman Reeves. Holly is getting his leg pulled in great shape.

Reports from all over Livingston county indicate an increased republican majority and that the prevailing idea is to let well-enough alone. Especially is that sentiment strong among the farmers, both old and young. It is told here that the young farmers who are just starting in will support the republican ticket almost to a man. They are starting out well with good prices and a good demand for products, and they remember how things were four years ago, and are induced regardless of former affiliations, to give the republicans credit for giving the people a good strong business administration. This shows liberality of ideas in politics and a simple desire to give proper credit.
