Why Electric Power is the Best Power

The motive power that runs a shop falls short a thousand miles of the ideal of efficiency, rapidity and economy if it's steam. Suppose the requirement is 25 or 50 or 100 or 1,000 horse-power and it is generated in boilers on the ground floor. Thence by means of shafting, belting and pulleys the power of the engines is transmitted throughout the building

Very impressive and inspiring this maze of humming machinery. ALSO VERY WASTEFUL. Because

A Large Share of the Power is Dissipated in Creating Subordinate Motion

In other words the 100 horse-power at the beginning is a good deal less than 100 effective horse-power when it reaches the third floor. A lot of it has been used to move the devices that carry it upstairs and a lot more has been lost.

No Waste With the Electric Motor Drive

No loss on the route. No throwing away of coal. The maximum power where it is required. If you want 1 or 100 or 1,000 horse-power on the third floor or any other floor, you get it exactly.

There are numerous other facts and reasons that prove the superiority and economy of Electric Power, and the wisdom of its adoption by manufacturers, large and small. And our experts can state them convincingly
