ELECTRIC LIGHT

THE HEALTHFUL LIGHT

All light is obtained by heating some substance to some degree of incandescence. Not even the sun is an exception to this universal rule.

When the operation is performed one of its attendant results is a more or less rapid consumption of oxygen. If the sky is the roof of the scene, this is of small consequence.

But if the light is in a closed room the story is different. Reduction of oxygen means that the air becomes vitiated—that is, deprived of its most important quality.

You wouldn't if you realized it and could avoid it deliberately abuse your lungs by forcing them to feed on impure air.

Yet the open light in a closed room does just that.

The Electric Light like every other artificial light is produced by heating something.

But the heating operation is performed in a vacuum. Absolutely no chance for a chemical process to influence the air under these circumstances.

The Electric Light is a bit of sunshine in a bottle—especially if its a (Mazda) tungsten light.

The most modest income can afford electric light.

The cost of equipping a house for the service is low.

We do the work at cost, payments distributed over 24 months, without interest.
