The following letter is received from Mrs. A. K. Beltzhoover, of Yuma, Arizona, who lived here a few years ago: "Editor STAR AND HERALD:—In a recent issue of your paper I see an account of the killing of a rattlesnake in Colorado by Mr. Carrithers, which he calls 'some serpent.' To see real 'serpents' you should come to Arizona. A few days ago my daughter, Mrs. Wheeler, heard what she thought was a rattlesnake 'singing' under the house. She coolly removed a box which stood in the way and found his snakeship coiled ready for action. Hastily procuring a shot gun she soon dispatched it with one shot, striking its head only, and in no way mutilating its body. It measured nearly five feet and had twelve rattles; as the end one was broken it probably had lost one or more. Mr. Beltzhoover had killed the mate to it in the front yard a few days previous."
