If you were going to try to improve this business we know what you'd do; and that's what we're doing. You'd work persistently, as we do, to improve the character of the merchandise; to have better goods; to come as near perfection as any human production can come. We realize fully that it's a lot better to satisfy a customer with our service and our merchandise than to give him his money back; better for him and for us. It's because we're aiming at perfection in quality, at highest possible values, at the best split of service, that we guarantee 100 per cent of satisfaction; we expect the goods to give it; if they don't—your money back.
