The body of Mr. W. L. Franklin, a former Dwight resident, was brought here Wednesday for burial from Champaign, his late home. The body was accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Stoolman, the latter formerly Miss Lois Franklin, Leslie E. Franklin, of Chicago, Harry Cheney, and other relatives from Champaign. The body was taken to Oak Lawn cemetery from the train, where a short service was held, Dr. Chas. L. Hamilton, making a prayer. The pall bearers were Messrs. Geo. N. Flagler, Peter D. Kern, Will T. Scott and R. L. Pierce.
Soldiers Guard Bank of England. Ever since the Gordon riots of 1780 the Bank of England has had military protection. The military watch is set every night. At five o'clock it marches with bayonets fixed from the headquarters of whichever guard's regiment has the duty for the week.

Ancient Irish "Keen."
The most interesting as well as the oldest and still most cherished customs are those that have gathered round deaths and funerals. The custom of "keens" so often mentioned by Irish writers, is now to be met with only in the west, where the soft plaintive voices seem to lend themselves peculiarly to it.
Stretched for a Gallop.
John, aged four, was walking along the street with his mother and they passed a butcher shop. John stopped to look at a little pig that was hanging in the window. He turned to his mother and said: "Look at the way that pig has his feet spread out. I bet they shot him while he was running."
Increasing Rapidly.
"When I first took hold of this place," said the new proprietor of the grocery store on the corner, "it was doing absolutely nothing, and now the business has doubled."
Electric Clocks in Hotel.
Two hundred electric clocks, controlled by a master timepiece, help furnish as many rooms in a new Liverpool hotel.

Tea Known in England Since 1615.
The earliest mention of tea drinking in England occurs in a letter from Mr. Wickham from Japan, dated June 27, 1615. In 1656 the English began to drink tea in society circles, the supply being imported from Java at the cost of $30 to $50 a pound. It is quite needless to say that the common people did not drink much tea during those days.
Giving Away the Secret.
Willing to have his neighbors think he was a fine musician, Brown installed a mechanical piano near a front window of his home, where he spent hours each day peddling out melodies. "Your father is a great piano player, isn't he?" one of the neighbors remarked to Brown's boy William one afternoon. "Yep," replied William, "but it makes his feet awful sore."
Spain Slow to Change.
In Spain, for the most part, washing is done in the old fashioned way, with cold water in large earthen tubs, generally in little wash houses on the flat Oriental roofs. Local custom is exceedingly hard to change, and the cheapness of labor obviates the use of modern machinery and time and labor saving devices.

MEMORIAL SUNDAY.

would not mourn the loss of a hero. From tan-yard, this quiet, plain, unassuming man marched to the foremost rank of generals. Like Cromwell or Napoleon in his masterful will—like David and Jonathan in his human sympathies. What he was he showed. What he thought he said without much diplomacy. He said little, but he did things. He said in his laconic style: "FIGHT along the whole line." "Every soldier must set his face towards Lee." "We will fight along this line and if it takes all summer." And still after the war was over, he was the first to cry: "Let us have peace." I refer to Ulysses S. Grant, the hero of Appomattox.
Again, we tap the drum and blow the bugle and call the glory-crowned sons of Illinois to sacred remembrance. There is a tall, rank figure that rises out of the dust of former greatness. The face dark and troubled. The attainments of his character, the traits of his manhood, these above all other features of his mortal gifts and physical personality, lifted him above his fellows—charitable, public-spirited, intelligent, sagacious, mingling the prudence of a great statesman with the simple faith of a Christian, he shines like a star in the last night of slavery ever-increasing in magnitude and unsullied beauty.
On May 16, 1860, the wigwam in Chicago fairly buzzed excitement, when the rail-splitter of Illinois was nominated for president of the United States. Men in the East shook their heads in dismay and said: It is a great mistake. Those at home were also mystified. But they all have learned to know him better, and everywhere—North and South and East and West—he is recognized as "The man of the hour" whose "world-wide humanity" is aptly embodied in a phrase of his second inaugural: "With malice toward none, with charity for all," mean Abraham Lincoln, the great Emancipator of three million slaves! What a grand array of knights of the golden heart and unstained and unblemished hand! And what else shall I say of the thousands of brave men Illinois furnished during the Civil and Spanish-American Wars?

Be on God's side, veterans, in your old age and it will be luminous with heavenly glory. You are not on the dark side of life. You are on the brightest side, you are nearest home, the mansions of peace, nearest the Victor's crown, nearest God! There will be another roll-call, not in tents of warfare, but in palaces of peace. There the life of the camp, the vicissitudes of the march and the roar of musketry are unknown. There is congenial companionship in that climate so warm and cheerful, with the love of God, loving hearts beating in unison with ours! "And that God which ever lives and loves, one God, one law, one element, and one far off divine event, to which the whole creation moves."
And now but one more word of appreciation. I wish to recognize the friendly ministrations to the victims of war. Like Florence Nightingale, who went through the German Encampment, her lamp and her very shadow being hailed with joy by the suffering who lay there, reminds one that women have always played a role, if not on the battlefield, then in the abodes of peace, ministering as they do here today, to the remembrance of the veterans.
History smiles through her tears! The Sons of Veterans who, under the direction and general management of the Post of the G. A. R., will stroll on Memorial Day—the graves with flowers, and deck the mounds with flags which we pray may be accepted as our silent "IN MEMORIAM."

The Star and Herald is published too early to give a report of the Memorial Day proceedings, an account of which will be given next week.
The three organizations wish to return their sincere thanks to all who assisted in making the observance successful.

A LITTLE LIGHT ON LOANS

Are You in a Box?
Do you need some ready cash to make the turn? See us. We have a lot of money to loan. It has of itself a fixed earning capacity of about 6 per cent.
A HUSTLER, however, who will add intelligence and hard work to this money can make it earn 3 or 4 times more than it would without his help. See the point? Then see us for a good real estate loan.
