PARTIES FOR LITTLE GIRLS.

Delightful Afternoon May Be Enjoyed With Doll Show.

For little girls especially there is a new doll show, and on this occasion any number may be invited to come and bring their dolls in their carriages. Mother will have to arrange a room or hall when this procession of little mothers is to take place. Then, when all have arrived, they may form in a line and wheel their coaches around and around from hall to living room and back if possible. A small refreshment table should be arranged where the dolls can make believe to partake of goodies while the little guests are being served. Each doll should be awarded a prize for some particular beauty—one for the prettiest eyes, another for her lovely curls, a third for her new hat, and so on—so that none are omitted, and the prizes may be small packages of remnants for doll clothes, a new sash ribbon and a few yards of lace for trimmings (since all little girls sew for their dolls and would be delighted with these special pieces).

Where children are interested in some particular kind of handwork it will give them a lot of pleasure to be invited for an afternoon to learn something new about it. This idea would be especially interesting to little girls, but some one at home would naturally have to be prepared to instruct them. The materials should be supplied. They will make the most dainty of souvenirs of a happy afternoon.

The same plan may be carried out for an afternoon of doll dressmaking, when the souvenirs may be new thimbles or little sewing bags. In any event, the matter of new dresses does not have to be considered.

KNIGHT OF THE WHISTLE.

More of a Trick Than a Game, but There's Lots of Fun in It.

"The knight of the whistle" is the name by which a most amusing game is known. The game is really a trick. The victim of it is told that the game consists in passing a whistle around a circle of players who are seated, while one standing in the middle is required to find it by its sound as it is blown from time to time. Whoever "counts out" for the game must arrange that the player in the middle is some one who does not know the trick, which is played thus: The whistle is fastened to one end of a string about a foot and a half long, at the other end of which is a bent pin. The pin is hooked into the clothes of the player in the middle of the ring, so that the whistle always hangs behind him. It is blown by some one, and the seeker turns quickly to find it, thus carrying it in front of some one else, who blows it again.

The victim of the trick is thus kept turning from side to side until he discovers the deception.

The pin can be hooked into his clothes without his noticing it by making him kneel down and close his eyes and then, after going through much ceremony, declaring him a "knight of the whistle" and striking him on the back.

While this is going on the whistle can be attached to him unobserved.

The players should pretend to pass the whistle from one to another to heighten the illusion.

RESOLUTIONS.

Any number of persons may play "resolutions," but the game is much more interesting in a party of a dozen persons or more.

One of its chief charms is its simplicity, which will enable it to be played on a moment's notice.

Seated in a circle, each member of the company writes upon a slip of paper a resolution, suggestion or recommendation for the coming new year, which may be applicable to themselves or to any other member of the company present, or to save time they may fill out several slips at once.

The slips are then placed in a hat, and one member of the company is chosen to read them aloud, picking them at random from the hat. They should be made to apply to each person in the circle in turn, beginning with the person seated to the left of the reader. Before reading each slip the reader should always announce the name of the person to whom it is to apply.

The reader may be changed with each round if desired.

As may be imagined, with a number of persons playing, the resolutions are seldom applicable to the person to whom they happen for the moment to be applied and often present the most incongruous contrasts. As a result the fun is fast and furious.

ADVERBS.

"Adverbs" is a very amusing game when there are witty people among the players. One of the players goes out of the room, and the rest sit around in a semicircle. The outsider has to ask a question of each person in turn, and the answer must embody the adverb.

Supposing that "boastfully" is chosen and that a player will reply that he has got the best motor in town and that he drives faster than any one else and yet he never has an accident. If a lady is asked if she likes dancing she will say that all her partners tell her she is as light as a feather and that she danced with the king the night before.

When the outsider has gone all around the circle he must divulge the word he has given it, and the person through whom he guessed it must go out in his place. "Sulkily," "madly," "conceitedly," "clomily" are all good words for this game. "Sarcastically" is one of the best, and "epigrammatically" would be first rate if the players were capable of carrying it out.
