

4-18-74

THE SEVEN-STORY windmill at The Lodge suffered damage from high winds early Sunday afternoon, as its rotary blades were blown to the ground. The 100 foot high structure, a longtime landmark of the community, has a strange look now without its whirling blades. Quite a clatter was heard when the vanes broke away from their mooring and fell into an area near the pond.

(Star and Herald photo)

