

MISCELLANY.

—There are two modes of establishing our reputation—to be praised by honest men, and to be abused by rogues.

It is best, however, to secure the former, because it will invariably be accompanied by the latter. His calumny is not only the greatest benefit a rogue can confer upon us, but it is also the only service he will perform for nothing.

LITERARY NOTICE.—A new novel is announced, entitled "Cross Currents."

We understand that, if successful, it will be followed by "Good-tempered Gooseberries," "Churlish Cherries," and "Pleasant Plums," are also spoken of as possible publications from the same fruitful pen.

—A fashionable party is now called a Daughtercultural show.

AVARICE.—Any attempt to spend less than double our income.

A GREYNA CUSTOMER.—A runaway couple were married at Greyna Green. The smith demanded five guineas for his services. "How is this?" said the bridegroom; "the gentleman you last married assured me that he only gave you one guinea."—True, said the smith, but he was an Irishman, I have married him six times. He is a good customer, but you I may never see again.

A WESTERN editor has got such a cold in his head, that water freezes on his face.
