

PRESENTATION.

On Saturday last, our friend Leland was elevated to the dignity of parantage.

This circumstance came to our knowledge through a pleasant little episode connected therewith to which we fear we cannot do justice as the reporter of THE STAR was not invited to be present.

When the fact became known congratulations poured in thick and fast till they became dry things and friend Leland was forced to lubricate with lemonade(?) which so raised the enthusiasm of his intimate friends that they conceived the happy idea of making it the occasion of a presentation, which they did in the shape of a beautifully finished and elegantly upholstered baby's carriage.

The presentation took place on the porch of the M' Pherson House, and was evidently a surprise to the happy father for when Mr. John Campbell had delivered himself of as fine a sample of rhetorical eloquence as ever tickled the ears of a Dwight audience, he was so overcome that duty of a response devolved on the talented Jos. I. Dunlop, who in a few felicitous remarks knocked the sparks from the rough corners of philology and sent them flying sparkling and sinctulating in every direction. The response though not lengthy was sufficiently so, to ventilate Webster and make his audience believe that a double portion of the dead Lexicographers mantel had become his by right of legacy. On the whole the friends had a nice time and we congratulate Mr. Leland, proposing to follow his brilliant example our selves, in due time.

DR KEELY, respectfully tenders his Professional services, and will promptly answer all calls that may be made upon him. Office at Seymours Drug Store.
