We want—in the distinguished village poet of ct to “pitch in,” and proceed our journalist editing a sheet of merit. But what will we can it be possible that we have ke in our FINAL HALT in this gh protected town of Dwight we struck a tide in its flow us to ultimate fortune? with its “X roads” in the ve. Its mammoth grain el- tone steam mill, beautiful s school house and pros- and blind factory, eventual a centre? and not only a METROPOLIS? A metropolis soul of Japheth that will arge till it spreads itself e state and trickles over in that event, will not the become the Greely of Ill.— philosopher of the west collections of a busy life of his days? And will a ars’ columns become the to political fortune?— os!! the poet (not Brad- eat aches from little toe t of our revery we were e clatter of horse hoofs discovered the genial, g and happy goodnatur- portly friend James G. s blackmare. Oh shades din and thy munificent thee! thou hast sent us wonderful lamp that we gain thanks! “the very pose we’ll shape him to ng The Star, congrat- y coming glory. Thou art offered James G. a paltry Representation. We THE STAR will give thee a PRESIDENCY. For though thou hast never patronized THE STAR to the extent of 3 cts for one copy—still we love thee and will make thee great, yea even unto thine elevation above men of greatness. We have chosen for thee J. G. a mansion of much whiteness on the cor. of 17th street and Pennsylvania avenue, in thy Nations Capitol, and we have chosen thee also a GRAND vizier of gentle blood and much erudition, even S. T. K. Prime, and we will hedge thee round about with a council of the wise men of Dwight, even the Gamaliels of thy former companionship, who will shade thee from the nations asperity with the foliage of their wisdom, lest at any time thou should’st dash thy head against the rock of reconstruction.

We will do more for thee James G. we will be thine organ and thou shalt be heard through us, henceforth we consecrate ourself and our genius to thy service, we will publish the usual number of anecdotes of thy boyhood And next week boldly hoist at the head of our column an independent ticket with thy magic name at the top—Get thy friends James G. to subscribe for the campaign edition of THE STAR $1 per annum HALF YEARLY IN ADVANCE, and we will “fight it out on this line if it takes all summer.”
