

PEARRE.

Mr. L. G. Pearre, that jewel in the crest of Dwight may be still heard from by the use of active enquiry, somewhere in the vicinity of the Rail Road Crossing. Mr. Pearre is a Gem, a rare gem, a "Pitt Diamond" among jewels and a kohinoor among Diamonds. Mr. Pearre follows various pursuits—all money making. Mr. Pearre is economical, but we presume honest, his modesty and diffidence are proverbial. His main business is INSURANCE but he dont wish the fact known during this hot weather for fearsome body may pester with business. He therefore asks us to take his advertisement out of our paper, and we are solicited to continue it by his active little partner Mr. Leland—now what shall we do continue, or drop it? we have MUCH respect for Mr. Leland and some, even SOME, left, for that swift winged Mercury known under the liquid and euphonious cognomen of L. G. Pearre.

Man, it is said, has his prototype in some of the lower animals—Pearre is of the EAGLE SPECIES—we recognize this fact by that "piercing eye and penetrating nose"—we quote this—so familliar to us each day as we pass for our papers to and from the cars. Oh Pearre! thou magic emblem of the fighting American game chicken, be not angry with us, and show not thine IRE for trifles, we will conciliate thee even to the extent of one of our DOUBLE CROWN CHERROOTS, if thou wilt in future smooth that corrugated brow and bathe us in the sunshine of thy smile. We take back the "swift winged mercury part" of this article L. G. or people may think we are lying too heavy for you knowing you never were faster than a mile in 2 17 1-2. Fare thee well then: thou "nimble footed Dexter"—again fare thee well.
