

THE M' PHERSON HOUSE.

Nothing has pleased us more since our return than to find this splendid house again under way and that prince of good fellows and best of sunny-faced landlords James R. Steele still at its head. Mr. Steele like the fabled Phoenix of old has again risen from his own ashes and with plumage brilliant and beautiful as ever, still puts in his claim as a caterer and palate tickler of the first water, and from what we know of him we think he need yield the palm to no man in the business.

Hotel keeping has now become a science, and Mr. Steele and his good lady have evidently mastered it; if we accept the testimony of the traveling public as evidence of the fact. Many commercial travelers deeming it a high privilege arrange their business so as to remain over Sunday and enjoy a hospitality that is not found at any other point along the entire line of railroad at very modest charge. May Mr. Steele live a thousand years and his shadow never grow shorter. May the M' Pherson under his regime be in the future what it has been in the past—a resting place for the weary dust begrimed traveler. The M' Pherson house is only a few steps from the Depot; and in consequence, handy to the traveling public.
