CONTEMPTIBLE.

We are informed of a contemptible undignified trick perpetrated by the 'singing jeweler' Caldwell, which for meanness may be rivaled, but not excelled. It occurred at the house of Mr. M' Williams on last Monday evening, on the occasion of a meeting of a party of ladies and gentlemen to practise for a coming concert. Mr. M' Williams retired early, but before going to bed, noticed it was raining, and having some concern for the health of a couple of Ladies present; kindly tendered them the use of a spare umbrella. The fellow Caldwell noticed where it was placed, and when the party were about to disperse coolly took possession of it, and would not relinquish it even when requested to do so by the ladies for whose use it was specially set aside. The ladies had to go home in the rain without a protection. Now an outrage of this kind ought not to go unnoticed, nor unpunished for that matter. If the husbands had administered summary punishment next morning with a rawhide it would have given him no more than he merited. So much for 'singers'; shove them into notice.

DWIGHT COURIER.

This pretty paper has passed wholly into the hands of Mr. J. Rutan, a very energetic young man and one well worthy of the continued patronage that has heretofore been given the paper. We admire the young mans pluck and spirit in the affair of the change, and wish him God speed in his arduous undertaking. The man "what sail'd the canoe," has sought other water to paddle in: Cigars were too dear in this latitude for o'er cheap smoking.

Mrs. Parsons left for the East last Monday to recuperate her health and lay in a large stock of fall and winter goods. Mrs. Parsons leaves many friends behind who will look anxiously for her return. Miss Mary Calais attends to the business during her absence which will be of a months duration or more. We wish Mrs. Parsons a pleasant trip; a happy time while gone and a safe return.
