

HUNTING ITEMS.

Hunting Items in and about the town of Dwight, amounts to about as much as Paddy's flea, when you have them they are but a trifle but mighty "troublesome to catch." Last week we had a press of matter, and this week a death, but look upon it as nature's compensation, and what ever is, is right. We have tried fairy moon-light and the broad glare of day, and thought we had succeeded measurably in hatching an egg once or twice, but it was a failure. The other morning in sheer desperation we left our business in the care of a friend, and sauntered out to see all that was to be seen. We directed our steps towards 'Democratic HIND QUARTERS, and discovered the Jew holding forth eloquently, to some Democratic friends of a different Nationality, on the virtues of Seymour and Blair, and at once turned our attentions on a sale that Mr. H. Newell was making, of a beautiful improved plow, but Michael 'could'nt see it' and we passed on. Reaching the German furniture man's, with the unspellable name, we halted to hear a PATENT RIGHT, MAN, with a FRUIT Drier, fail to talk said with the unspellable name—into buying it, though being a good talker he afterwards took J. Boaks, of PEANUT and Ice cream notoriety, in on it, for a cool couple of hundred. We then dropped into Seymour's Drug establishment and finding his pretty little store crowded with country customers, we didn't ask after the baby but left instant, and directed our steps—guided by instinct towards our own store, passed Cornell's stable and heard the redoubtable Hiram swearing to the truth of some ME he had told an 'honest farmer.' Looking into our own door, discovered a small boy investing one cent in candy and passed on, disgusted. Reaching Dittus' we paused, to see a bouncing little boy,—we are sure of the sex—in a sickly looking woman's arms essay the arduous and dexterous operation of wiping his nose with his own toe. Dittus looked full of business, as also did the darkeys. We next looked into Eldredge's and discovered the process by which chickens are kept sweet by packing, to their journeys end. All the clerks were busy, and he has a 'Bully set of klureks.'

PHILOSOPHY

By P.

Closely connected with the history of human intelligence, or the instinct, or the relations to other sciences, Theology.

But with must be considered work, in some of our enquiries ing it. It lies in the sphere of conservation; compensation thus derived error. The only we know by all sources consciousness intelligence more unknown far the two how far they terminate, not line, and say stops and wages.

This subject is a life one, and one letter; to more on it, week. Let us fine instinct denote brute if possible, characteristics; we mine where in man.

We understand action, government of on the one hand forces of man from reason to a given end the subject works; a law constitution but transmit to be found in
