'The people' assembled at the place appointed in 'anxious expectation' of hearing Dick Yates. Unhappy disappointment! Alas! The old story repeated. A bogus telegram announcing the fact of that great man being suddenly called to WASHINGTON, and too (—) to meet an honest appointment. Our readers will please fill in the ellipsis to suit their fancy. But his place was well and ably filled by a Mr. Bushnell, a gentleman, who if he had not spent so much time in an absurd endeavor to prove that the southern man, before the War, could discover no 'odoriferous aroma' from the Nigger—would have made himself more agreeable and acceptable to the sensible portion of the multitude on the ground to hear him, but he dwelt long and tediously on this silly nonsense. On all other questions he was sound, and threw much light on intricate matters, much harped upon by the opposition, and those who heard him could not help being convinced that notwithstanding the obloquy heaped upon the Republican party in the past four years administration, that their policy was a sound one, and in fact the only one, that could be adopted with the salvation of the country in view.

But we shall have a chan e to hear an argument on the other side today and will improve it. Two of the Hutchinson singers were on the ground and began the business of the day by one of their soul stirring patriotic songs. It would be invidious to mention a few of our citizens whomade themselves prominent on that day and leave others out, we will therefore content ourself by saying as a body, they deserve thanks for the handsome manner in which things generally, were conducted. The TAN-NERS made a splendid display; especially our mounted friends from Broughton, who staid with us till night and treated us to an illuminated night procession.
The irresistible genius of our peculiar American institutions brought forth the crowning gem of the days business, in the appearance of the ladies representing our NATIONAL COLORS in the procession of the evening.
