ings which we advert to with much pain. During the speaking we noticed a number of men wearing the Tanner regalia in the crowd, criticising everything said by the speaker, in no very gentle voice, and keeping up a continual jabbering, very annoying not only to those who were near them, but to the speaker. Now we are Republican in our sympathies from principle, though not a voter, and from a Republican stand point, we denounce such unmanly, unprincipled, meanness as unworthy of the great party those men pretended to represent. It was cowardly in the extreme to stand up and give the lie to every thing uttered by a man they were not called upon to listen to. The Democrats did not interfere in the meeting held two days before, and why should they be subjected to an annoyance so contemptible by a pack of pusillanimous blackguards hiding themselves and their poltroonery, under the mask of another party—Had they got their just deserts, some of them would have been subjects for doctor's care. We trust nothing of this kind will ever occur again.
