A TERRIBLE & FATAL ACCIDENT.

On Sunday evening a German boy employed by William Chester, two and a half miles East of Dwight, rode a mule into town and left for home before dark. Nothing was seen of him in the morning which alarmed his employer for his safety, an alarm well founded, as his mangled remains were found in the course of the morning near the house of Mr. Yates a half mile East of Mr. Chesters. The mule was taken up by Mr. Bladen a mile North of where the body was found. From the appearance of things it was evident that he had fallen from the animal and his foot catching in the stirrup he was dragged to death.

SOLD OUT.

Mr. J. B. Campbell made a sale of his entire house hold effects last Saturday, with the intention of bidding an eternal farewell to Dwight as a piece of future abode. It seems like losing one of our town idols to have Mr. Campbell "tear" himself from among us. But we wish him prosperity and happiness "where so e'er he may pitch his tent" with a long life to enjoy it. We would like to make a poetical quotation at the end of this notice as a souvenir for John's remembrance, but nothing appropriate occurring, narrow columns and a want of small type for that purpose prevents us.

OYSTER SUPPER.

We ought to speak of a RECHERCHE little bivalve supper given under the auspicious of Mr. R. Withers and the proprietor of the Dwight House, Mr. H. Cornell. The supper was the result of an election bet in which there was mutual loss—but a decided gain to those invited. The company was a select one and a general fund of wit and good feeling prevailed.

We are sorry to announce the fact, that among the many who are leaving us for abodes elsewhere, is Mr. F. W. Calais a young man of rare worth and genius. We could better afford to lose a dozen Couriers with Editors and 'devils' complete, than one Calais.
