[Continued from First page.] times to deceive himself he had been ruined. When he cleared the house of commons, and exclaimed 'You are an adulterer, you are an extortioner, you are a glutton, and you are no longer a parliament,' suppose a single member had rejoined, 'You are a hypocrite and by this illegal act have forfeited your commission, and and are no longer an officer; soldiers, at your peril?' Such a speech might have turned the whole tide of affairs, and have sent back Oliver to the Tower instead of Whitehall, never again to quit it, except to lay his head upon the block.
